CALL FOR PAPERS

IM-TCD-ND Workshop on: International Macroeconomics and Capital Flows

Dublin - June 19-20, 2017

The recent global financial crisis has put in evidence the relevance of gaining a better understanding of the determinants and implications of financial globalisation, international capital flows, exchange rate realignments, sovereign default, etc. In this light, policymakers around the world face new challenges to attain internal and external goals, as well as objectives in relation to global financial stability.

This conference aims at bringing together leading scholars to discuss recent developments in international macroeconomics and capital flows from both empirical and theoretical perspectives.

Some specific examples of relevant topics include:

- Financial globalisation, international capital flows and its measures
- Cross-borders financial spillovers due to global risk, sovereign default risk and policy uncertainty
- Sovereign debt management
- The international transmission of shocks
- The macroeconomics of exchange rates
- The design of macroeconomic policies and institutions for an integrated world

The deadline for paper submissions is March 1st, 2017. Decisions will be communicated to prospective contributors by mid-March. Papers should be sent to benetria@tcd.ie or csosapad@nd.edu. Please indicate availability to also act as discussant. Financial support is available upon request.

Organisers:

Agustín S. Bénétrix (Trinity College Dublin, IM-TCD)

César Sosa-Padilla (University of Notre Dame)
