10.30am-3pm, Wednesday 28th November 2012

Hosted by the Cultures Academic Values and Education research group
School of Education TCD

It is fifty years since the Investment in Education study was initiated by the OECD and the Department of Education in 1962.

This seminar is intended to mark the extraordinary contribution made by the study to the transformation of the Irish educational sector. The event will also offer the opportunity to consider contemporary themes in Irish education (participation; the ‘knowledge economy’; rationalisation) and discuss the implications of the report for contemporary educational policy.

Guest contributors will include Prof. John Fitzgerald (ESRI), Prof. Maria Slowey (DCU), Dr. Frank Barry (TCD) and Prof Áine Hyland.

Venue: Hoey/Neill Theatre
Long Room Hub, Trinity College Dublin
