Paula Flynn has been invited to contribute a presentation on the topic of ‘Youth Participation and Intergenerational Dialogue’ at the European Network Cities for Children Seminar on 30th September, hosted by the Department of Community and Social Development, Dublin City Council.

Opening addresses at the seminar will be made by the Dublin City Lord Mayor, Oisín Quinn, Ombudsman for Children Emily Logan, and Linking Generations Northern Ireland expert Vikki Titterington. After lunch there will be presentations and a panel discussion chaired by Senator Jillian van Turnhout.

The aim of this Dublin City seminar is to bring together participating European cities, Dublin based representatives from community, voluntary and the statutory sectors as well as representatives from third level institutions to explore how Participation through Intergenerational Dialogue can be progressed. Learning from the seminar will be fed back to the Cities for Children Network to influence the future development of policy promotion for relevant authorities. Dublin City Council, Community & Social Development will endeavor to support any learning to be integrated as part of its own actions through its integrated working with other key agencies throughout the City.

http://www.citiesforchildren.eu/