

Seminar on the National Strategy for Higher Education
(Hunt report)

10am-1pm Thursday 19 April 2012

It is just over a year since the Hunt report was published – one year on it is possible to gain an initial appreciation of how the report has influenced official policy, institutional approaches and practice on the ground.

This seminar is intended to provide a forum for open discussion of the Hunt report and its implications for higher education in Ireland. The event will offer an opportunity to draw together a variety of perspectives both within academia and from public and private stakeholders. Guest panelists from the universities, Institutes of Technology, the world of business and the trade union movement will discuss the implications of the report for funding, finance and sustainability of higher education institutions. A number of workshops will also discuss the impact of the strategy on research, teaching and learning and the student experience.

To register for the event, please contact Dr. John Walsh (walshj8@tcd.ie) or Dr. Andrew Loxley (loxleya@tcd.ie): we would ask participants to register by 5 April 2012.

Venue: The Sutherland Centre
Institute for International Integration Studies (IIIS)
Arts Building Trinity College Dublin

Hosted by Cultures Academic Values and Education research group

School of Education
TCD