Research topic: Bullying Prevention Pact

Abstract: Bullying behaviour in schools can marginalise and exclude children from activities making their school experience unhappy and fraught with fear. The Bullying Prevention Pact (BPP) is a research initiative that has the goal of making all learners feel included in the school community making the education environment a place where children feel safe and happy to learn. The BPP utilises drama elements along with information about bullying behaviour to actively engage learners to construct knowledge about bullying with the aim of giving the children a sense of agency and empowerment with regards to this excluding behaviour.
