- Four-day intensive course led by a panel of international experts in the field.
- Covering all the major infectious and non-infectious diseases of laboratory animals.
- With interactive lectures and practical sessions on diagnostic techniques.
- Wet labs, necropsy technique, microbiological quality control, clinical pathology.
- Making use of superb facilities at Trinity College Dublin.
- With support from ESLAV and ECLAM to keep costs low.
- A training opportunity for those interested in a refresher course or seeking continuing professional education or preparing to become an ECLAM Diplomate and also a brilliant asset or refresher for every veterinarian working with laboratory animals.
- Emphasis on mice and rats but all the major species will be covered (hamsters, gerbils, guinea pigs, rabbits, ferrets, primates)
- In a relaxed atmosphere, with plenty of opportunity to interact with colleagues and lecturers.
- High quality CPD in the heart of Dublin, the fair city.
- Course costs cover all tuition fees, study materials, course lunches and coffee breaks and course dinner.

A grand, multi-story library with high vaulted ceilings, wooden bookshelves, and a central aisle with people. The architecture is classical, featuring dark wood paneling and ornate carvings. The shelves are filled with books, and the central aisle is lined with busts and display cases. People are seen walking and reading in the distance, creating a sense of activity and scholarship.

The summer school is a training event that is supported by ECLAM and that can be an addition for residents in fulfilling certain aspects of training requirements; for more information of fully approved standard training programs please contact the ECLAM secretariat.
