

Between imperial and proto-national:

Conflicted Cities

c.1880-1930

A one-day conference/workshop
in Trinity College Dublin
Saturday 7 June 2014

This conference/workshop aims to stimulate debate and research into the conflicted role of smaller cities and new national capitals in Europe, and in territories under European colonial rule, in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

Venue:
IIS Seminar Room, 6th floor, Arts Building, Trinity College Dublin.

Registration is free.
Please email: conflictedcities@gmail.com

For further details please see: www.conflictedcities.wordpress.com

Conflicted Cities: between imperial and proto-national c. 1880-1930
Sat. 7 June 2014
IIS Seminar Room, 6th Floor, Arts Building, Trinity College Dublin

09.30h – 11.00h Session 1: The other Athens and the Second City

Graeme Morton

- Scotland's Disgrace: Negotiating Governance in the Shadow of Empire

Chris Harvie

- Second city - First war: Glasgow 1912-1916

11.00h – 11.30h Break

11.30h – 13.00h Session 2: Cultural conflicts and nationalism

Manjushree Singh

- Dynamics of National and Local Politics: a study of Delhi: 1926-1931

Gareth Jenkins

- Belfast, Liverpool, Britishness and Protestant Sectarian Violence 1880-1922: 'Rowdyism versus Respectability'

Brendan Twomey

- Dublin 1890-1914: A capital in waiting?

13.00h – 14.00h Lunch

14.00h – 15.30h Session 3: City v. Nation in buildings and books

Bob Morris

- Re-building Edinburgh: re-imaging Scotland – a contest for space, 1846-1914.

Halena Oleta

- Political Topos vs Poetical Tropos: one city of three national cultures

Ciarán Wallace

- Our Nation's Capital: locating Dublin in Ireland's history

15.30h – 17.00h Roundtable discussion with tea and coffee