

Athens is an access system used by some universities which appears very prominently on a lot of publisher sites.

TCD Library does not use the Athens system to provide access to e-journals and databases.

All the resources we subscribe to are available to TCD members using computers on campus. There is no need to login; publishers will recognise the address of the computer and take you directly to resources we subscribe to.

Google can be used to access resources but to be sure that we subscribe, we would recommend that you use the Library catalogue at <http://stella.catalogue.tcd.ie/> or our list of resources at <http://www.tcd.ie/Library/collections/databases.php>

To access e-journals and databases off campus you must select the resource from the Library catalogue or website and enter your College username and network login password when prompted (see our web page at <http://www.tcd.ie/Library/using-library/off-campus.php> for more information).