GOOGLE AND GOOGLE SCHOLAR

Trinity
College
Dublin

The University of Dublin

- Both are good to get you started
- Google Scholar is useful for finding a particular article you already know about, or others that cite it

BUT CONSIDER:

- No-one outside Google really knows how Google assigns relevancy
- It's very likely articles you want but don't know about are listed in Google Scholar but finding them is another matter
- Google Scholar is essentially a search engine not a bibliographical tool

Google Scholar:

Use the link on the Library website for 2 reasons:

You can connect to the full text if we have it

You can import the citation into EndNote

Inter-Library Loans

The Library offers an Inter-Library Loan service which provides access to material not held within Trinity College Dublin whilst also supplying material from its own stock to other libraries.

Telephone: +353 1 8961654

E-mail: loans@tcd.ie

For Trinity College Dublin Staff and Students

- This service is only available to currently-registered staff and students
- Students pay €8 for each standard request
- Staff pay €10 for photocopies and €12 for loans
- The Library reserves the right to increase charges for non-standard requests
- An e-mail is sent when an item is available for collection
- Items must be collected from the Admissions Counter, Berkeley Library (PDF 101KB) during its opening hours
- Uncollected material will incur the standard charge

Article Photocopies

Photocopies of articles in journals may be requested by filling in an ORANGE Inter-Library Loan form, available from the Duty Librarian's Desk or any Service Counter. The declaration on the reverse must be signed before a request can be processed.

Photocopies are usually received within 24 hours.

- There are helpful Datapac guides that you can collect from the Library. If you have any questions you can e-mail Datapac or call in person to meet the Datapac Technician (details are in the guide)

REFERENCES!

The Library of Trinity College Dublin provides training and support for EndNote, a widely-used bibliographic reference software tool for publishing and managing bibliographies. See the compatibility list for advice on which word processor software can be used with which versions.

EndNote allows users to:

- Create a personalised database of references
- Type the references or import them from a database
- Create a bibliography for a thesis, assignment or journal article in the reference style required, and easily change the reference style

Trinity College Dublin has a site licence for EndNote and current staff and students are permitted to install a copy of the software on College-owned machines.

EndNote is also installed on PCs in College Computer Rooms.

Staff and students who wish to use EndNote on non-College-owned PCs may purchase the desktop software from the distributor using this link or register to use the free EndNote Online version.
