IMMIGRATION AND FAMILY LIFE: REUNIFICATION IN IRISH LAW -

CLIODHNA MURPHY*

Introduction

Family reunification – which for the purposes of this article means the process whereby family members who are separated due to forced or voluntary migration regroup in a country other than the country of origin of one or more of the family members – is treated by scholars and immigrant advocates as a key element of the integration process and as essential for migrants' wellbeing. The socio-political consequences of failure to facilitate family reunification have been emphasised by the International Labour Organisation in the following terms:

Prolonged separation and isolation lead to hardships and stress situations affecting both the migrants and the families left behind and prevent them from leading a normal life. The large numbers of migrant workers cut off from social relations and living on the fringe of the receiving community create many well-known social and psychological problems that, in turn, largely
