Finding Material

As a copyright library with currently over six million items in formats ranging from manuscripts to online resources, it is important that you become familiar with the Library's collections through the proper use of catalogues and search engines as early as possible. In SEARCH COLLECTIONS on our homepage, you will see the full range of these search tools.

Getting started: To get an overview of recommended resources, as well as subject librarian contact details, select Subject Librarians (Psychology). You may need to view other guides depending on your specialty.

STELLA search is the main library discovery tool acting as both catalogue to our collections and gateway to other external online resources. This is the main searchbox on the library website.

Books

To search for books (incl. e-books), reports, official (govt.) publications etc, type the title, author or combination into the main searchbox. Then select Library catalogue only to limit to our collection. Clicking on the title will give you full details including location and number of copies available for that title. Books are either on the open shelves or in closed access (Stacks). The main Psychology collection is located in the Berkeley library (2nd floor). See Floorplans on the homepage for layout. For open shelf books which may be on loan to other readers, use the Reserve it function to place a hold/reservation on that item.

Closed access items, which can be consulted by undergraduates and borrowed by postgraduates, can be requested online using the option Request stack item. Otherwise, use call slips if indicated. These are available in the Library.

To limit search results to a particular format e.g. theses, dvds, print books, first select Library Catalogue Only, then choose Format and click on the material type of interest. These options are available under Refine By on the left margin of the results page.

Other catalogues: "Classic" and other more specialised catalogues are available under Search Collections. Unlike STELLA search they do not support stack requests.

JOURNALS

STELLA search uniquely facilitates JOURNAL ARTICLE searching. Type in the article title and follow the links. If the pdf or html icons are not readily available, follow the link resolver indicated by a square TCD logo or Check TCD e-journals button to get to the fulltext. (Please report broken links to cosullvn@tcd.ie).

TIP: If your search is unsuccessful type in the name of the journal and review options for online and print editions. Open shelf print journals are shelved at 150 in the Ussher Library basement but the majority are in Stacks. Use call slips to request these. Delivery from Santry stacks takes one day. Campus stacks take 1.5 hours.

For further help, ask counter staff, email me (see over) or if unavailable, email dutylibrarian@tcd.ie.

When you are off-campus, you will need your College username/password to access purchased online resources. If you encounter access problems relating to your password contact IT Services (itservicedesk@tcd.ie).

Repositories: Free, online (Irish) research is available in Trinity's TARA repository which is part of the all Irish university RIAN repository. See under Search Collections or Databases.

Theses: See under Support and Training for details including an online tutorial on Finding theses. Trinity theses are stack items and must be requested online. For a complete listing of psychology theses in the library, type Psychology into STELLA, next choose Library catalogue only and under Format, refine further by the TCD thesis category. You can also search by author, title or degree title e.g. Psychology, Ph.D. (N.B. Masters not held in library after 2012).

Databases and E-books

Databases contain valuable information for your research. As mentioned earlier, many are now searched via STELLA but not all. The majority provide peer-reviewed, scholarly content and formats range from purely journal and e-book content to mixtures of materials. The former generally provide direct access to the fulltext whereas other bibliographic databases provide a reference and summary to a range of material e.g. govt. publications, theses, reports, conf. proceedings and journal articles. In this case, the Library has embedded links to the online content where available. A general tip for database use is to always register with the database provider to avail of useful features (Alerts, Search history etc.). Use HELP sections to improve searching and the Thesaurus (Subject Terms) to ensure your search terms are accurate. E-book databases for Psychology include MyiLibrary, Books@Ovid.

Material not in our collection

If we don't have the item you require, ask about inter-library loans (€8) and/or the postgraduate ALCID reader card which grants reader access to other Irish College and University libraries. Undergraduates can get admission letters from the duty desk.
