Module Coordinators	Dr Martine Cuypers, Prof. Monica Gale
Module Learning Outcomes with embedded Graduate Attributes	On successful completion of this module, students should be able to: LO1. Recognise the myths, beliefs, values and aspirations that were central to individual and collective identities in Classical Athens or Republican Rome LO2. Explore how these identities and values were constructed, corroborated and manipulated in political, economic, religious, literary, cultural and private life LO3. Analyse relevant textual and/or visual evidence with consideration of its literary, intellectual, social and historical contexts LO4. Evaluate and apply recent critical approaches to Athenian or Roman identity and ideology LO5. Discuss how key parameters of Athenian or Roman politics relate to modern political systems and phenomena such as imperialism, colonisation, migration and globalisation LO6. Articulate evidence-based views both orally and in writing
Module Content	This module explores the beliefs, values and aspirations which underpin the political, economic, religious and private life in an ancient city state that ruled an empire – either democratic Athens in the 5th century BCE or the Roman republic in the time of Cicero – as emerging from its literature and other cultural manifestations. You will learn what it meant to be an Athenian citizen or a Roman citizen in a time of political and intellectual crisis, learn how identities were constructed, maintained, and manipulated, and assess how cultural claims informed political ambitions. You will explore aspects of individual and collective self-representation, and competing views of the relation between public and private, mass and elite, human and divine, and Athenian/Roman assertions of cultural and military hegemony.
Teaching and Learning Methods	This module is taught through weekly lectures and small-group seminars, supported by online learning (Blackboard). Attendance and preparation are compulsory.
