Dr Esther Murphy

Esther is a Visiting Research Fellow at the School of Education's IES Research Group. Since completing her PhD in Disability Studies and Intercultural Studies at Dublin City University (2011), Esther has worked as postdoctoral researcher in academia and non-government agencies. In particular Esther contributed to IES research projects 'Inclusive Research in Irish Schools' (Project IRIS) and Transitions for students with disabilities and/or SEN into third level and further education. As the lead Irish researcher for the EU Life Long Learning funded digital inclusion project at NCBI's Centre for Inclusive Technology, Esther led several collaborative inclusive education workshops at the School of Education. Recently Esther was the Principal Investigator for two recent national AHEAD/IES access to higher education projects with 1) students with a visual impairment (2014) 2) students with mental health difficulties (2016). Currently, Esther is a Research Fellow working with TCD's School of Nursing & Midwifery as part of Prof. Agnes Higgins's mental health research team and with Prof. Mary McCarron's TILDA-ID team. As part of her contribution to the IES Research Group, Esther supervises Masters in Education (M.Ed) inclusive education projects and has recently led the development of a new strand focused on mental health and well-being in educational environments for the M.Ed programme.
