

PO8045
State and Society in the Developing World

Dr Michelle D'Arcy
Darcym1@tcd.ie

Course description

What kind of institutions promote human flourishing? How can the character of domestic politics and institutions explain underdevelopment in the Global South? These are the fundamental questions that this course addresses. In the course we will take a historically informed approach to answering these questions over the longue duree. We will look first at how structural factors like geography and histories of colonialism and slavery have shaped long term institutional development. We will then examine in detail the nature of the state in most countries in the Global South, comparing them to states in the Global North. The relationship between democracy and development will be examined, including the reasons why clientelism and corruption are so pervasive. Finally we will address the issue of sequencing: how democratizing at different levels of state development leads to different development outcomes.

Learning outcomes

On successful completion of this module students should be able to:

- Understand the long-term legacies of colonialism and slavery
- Analyze the nature of states in the Global South
- Critically review the evidence on the relationship between democracy and development
- Understand the root causes of clientelism and corruption
- Debate the effect of aid on politics and institutions

Course structure

There will be 5 weekly seminars of 3 hours and is worth 5 ECTS credits. Attendance at these seminars is compulsory. Please contact me in advance by email if you cannot make a seminar.

Assessment

1. Participation (20%): You will be evaluated on your participation in class: how actively you contribute to the discussion, demonstrate preparation for class, and critically engage with the material.

2. Response papers (20%):

Students are expected to submit three short response papers (of 700 words). Papers are due the week after the class for that topic.

All response papers should be submitted via Blackboard.

A response paper should critically engage with the overarching topic for that week, relating the readings to each other and to the main questions. It should show understanding of the key arguments of at least two of the readings, critically engage with these readings (especially through comparing them to each other), and relate their arguments to the overall question under consideration.

3. Final Assignment (60%)

The final assignment has two parts.

Part One (55%):

Select one of the five topics we have looked at on the course. Focusing on the key questions on that topic and two case study countries in which to analyze this question. Justifying why you have chosen these two countries, use the comparison between them to analyze a) what light these cases shed on the question under discussion and how they relate to the general literature discussed on the course and b) how the similarities and differences between these cases provide insight into the question. Note: your analysis should be empirical and analytical rather than normative. The assignment should be approximately 2,500 words in length (+/- 10%) excluding notes/bibliography. Exceeding the limit will result in deduction of marks.

Part Two (5%):

Write a short reflection piece (500-600 words) engaging with the key insights you take away from the module. This piece can be personal in nature and relate the academic themes of the course to your lived experience, and the ways in which your outlook may have changed over the module.

Essays must be submitted via Blackboard.

Academic Dishonesty and Citations

The university takes plagiarism very seriously. There are severe penalties associated with passing someone else's work off as one's own. This includes plagiarizing the work of others, using an essay writing service, or any similar activity. All written assignments will pass through an electronic plagiarism checker. Remember that careless note-taking can lead to this happening: remember to enclose direct quotations in quotation marks, and even when paraphrasing, ensure that a reference is provided. The university's policy regarding plagiarism can be found at:
<http://www.tcd.ie/undergraduate-studies/general-regulations/plagiarism.php>.

Please use the Harvard style of citations with the authors name, year of publication and page reference in brackets in the text and the full quotation in the reference list at the end of the essay. Wikipedia, blogs, and other such online sources might be useful as a first step but they should not be relied upon when writing essays.

These readings are subject to change. Additional material may be added.

Week 1: Geography and History

Key questions: how have history and geography shaped patterns of development?
How does history continue to matter?

Required readings

Nunn, Nathan, and Leonard Wantchekon. "The slave trade and the origins of mistrust in Africa." American Economic Review 101, no. 7 (2011): 3221-52.

Sokoloff, Kenneth L., and Stanley L. Engerman. "Institutions, factor endowments, and paths of development in the new world." Journal of Economic perspectives 14, no. 3 (2000): 217-232.

Acemoglu, Daron, Simon Johnson, and James A. Robinson. "Reversal of fortune: Geography and institutions in the making of the modern world income distribution." The Quarterly journal of economics 117, no. 4 (2002): 1231-1294.

Week 2: The State

Key questions: how are states built? how have processes of state formation varied between the Global North and South? How does this explain varying levels of development?

Required readings

Herbst, Jeffrey. "War and the State in Africa." International Security 14, no. 4 (1990): 117-139.

Moore, Mick. "Revenues, state formation, and the quality of governance in developing countries." International Political Science Review 25, no. 3 (2004): 297-319.

Centeno, Miguel Angel. Blood and debt: War and the nation-state in Latin America. Penn State Press, 2002.

Herbst, Jeffrey. States and power in Africa. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 2014. Chpt 2 (p 35-53)

Week 3: Democracy and Autocracy

Key question: Does democracy lead to development? Is democracy incompatible with development and rapid growth? Is Chinese autocracy a viable development strategy for developing countries?

Required readings

D'Arcy, Michelle, and Marina Nistotskaya. "State first, then democracy: Using cadastral records to explain governmental performance in public goods provision." Governance 30, no. 2 (2017): 193-209.

Ross, Michael. 2006. 'Is democracy good for the poor?' American Journal of Political Science, 50(4), 860-874.

Leftwich, Adrian. "Democracy and development: Is there institutional incompatibility?." Democratisation 12, no. 5 (2005): 686-703.

Zhao, Suisheng. "The China Model: can it replace the Western model of modernization?." Journal of contemporary China 19, no. 65 (2010): 419-436.

Week 4: Clientelism and Corruption

Key questions: How do we explain the puzzle that corruption increases in young democracies?

Required readings

Lindberg, Staffan I. "'It's Our Time to Chop'": Do Elections in Africa Feed Neo-Patrimonialism rather than Counter-Act It?." Democratization 10, no. 2 (2003): 121-140.

Cheeseman, N., & Klaas, B. P. (2018). How to rig an election. Yale University Press. Chpt 2

Charron Nicholas and Victor Lapuente. 2010. "Does Democracy Produce Quality of Government?" European Journal of Political Research 49(4): 443-470.

Arriola, Leonardo R. "Patronage and political stability in Africa." Comparative Political Studies 42, no. 10 (2009): 1339-1362.

Week 5: Aid and the State

Questions: does aid harm or help long term institution-building in developing countries?

Bräutigam, Deborah A., and Stephen Knack. "Foreign aid, institutions, and governance in sub-Saharan Africa." Economic development and cultural change 52, no. 2 (2004): 255-285.

D'Arcy, Michelle. "Non-state actors and universal services in Tanzania and Lesotho: state-building by Alliance." The Journal of Modern African Studies 51, no. 2 (2013): 219-247.

Duffield, Mark. "Aid and complicity: the case of war-displaced Southerners in the Northern Sudan." The Journal of Modern African Studies 40, no. 1 (2002): 83-104.

Kelsall, Tim. "Going with the grain in African development?." Development Policy Review 29 (2011): s223-s251.