1 Description & Objectives

This graduate seminar offers an overview of major theories and analytical approaches in the field of international relations. Each week we will cover a particular theoretical lens or approach through which scholars have sought to make sense of the international environment. The readings in this module reflect research that aims to provide logically consistent and empirically supported explanations of outcomes in world politics. The overarching objective of the seminar is for students to become acquainted with scientific approaches to the study of international relations on a wide range of issue areas.

2 Covid-19 procedures

We will strive for face to face teaching (F2F) but all students should be aware and prepared that teaching conditions may change on short notice if government or Trinity guidelines change. Teaching will also be dynamically adapted to the number of students who are unable to attend any F2F teaching. Students unable to participate F2F will be able to attend online and I will aim to include them as best as possible in the F2F seminar using audio/video and chat. I will set up an online session of the seminar every week in case anyone develops symptoms shortly before class.

Please do not attend any F2F class if you have Covid-19 related symptoms. All participants must follow government and Trinity guidelines when attending a F2F session!

If I have to isolate myself our weekly sessions will naturally move online – you will be notified by email. Office hours will predominantly take place on Zoom. Please schedule a separate office hour appointment if there is an issue which you would rather discuss F2F.

3 Module Requirements and Policies

All written assignments are to be submitted through Blackboard. Each assignment will be separate on the platform. More information on this will be provided in class.

All submission deadlines are naturally in Irish time. All late work, unless excused in advance by the course lecturer will be penalized at a rate of 5 marks per day (up to a maximum of 30 marks). All requests for excuses from submission penalties, whether justified by a medical certificate, a LENS report, or other reason, must be submitted in advance of the deadline to the course instructor by the student’s college tutor. Where any essay is submitted after the deadline to Turnitin for any reason, the student must also email me on berzj@tcd.ie to inform them it has been submitted. All coursework needs to be submitted via the plagiarism detector Turnitin, now integrated into the course’s Blackboard account.

Under no circumstances will written work be accepted after the set work has been marked and returned to other students, or after the end of the term. Requests for special consideration advanced at a later stage will not be accepted. Written work may, of course, be handed in earlier than the due date. Response papers, policy brief and the essay should be clearly marked with the student’s name.

One point may be subtracted from any written assignment for every 100 words over the given word limit, i.e. one point for a final essay with 3100 words, two points for a final essay of 3200 words, etc.

3.1 Class Discussion (15%)

Student participation in class discussion and debate on the readings is a central element of the seminar. Students are expected to have read all required readings and to have acquired detailed knowledge and developed informed critiques of the readings prior to the class meeting. The objective of class discussion will be to critically assess the readings, discuss their relevance to understanding current international affairs and offer insights on how new research could improve the field. Students will be evaluated on the quality of their input in class discussion and debate.

It is expected that students ask informed questions after class presentation. Those who are deemed to be falling behind in class participation may be asked to submit additional response papers. Some questions to keep in mind while reading: What are the central theories discussed in the study? Are the assumptions of the theory consistent or do they contradict each other? If the study seeks to test a theory with evidence, what are the findings? How would you rate the quality of the test, e.g. do the data adequately measure the theoretical concepts; is the design strong enough to adequately test the theory? Are there cases that the author has overlooked? How would you go about re-designing the test to overcome any limitations? Can the study be extended to cover other issue areas; if so, which ones?

3.2 Oral Presentation (5%)

Students will be required to give a 10 minute oral presentation of one response paper during the term. No two students can present the same paper. This means that if you are presenting in a given week, you must submit a response paper by the Thursday before the meeting. A sign-up sheet will be circulated during the first meeting. Presentations will be evaluated based on the quality of content and execution: organization, demonstrated subject knowledge, effective use of visual aids, engagement with audience, and elocution. Also, be prepared to answer questions from your peers and the lecturer. These questions will be used as the starting point for our seminar discussion. For some tips on effective execution of an oral presentation, see: http://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC1857815/.

3.3 Response Papers (30%): 3 required + 2 extra

Students will be required to submit three (3) response papers over the duration of the term. Students also have the opportunity to submit up to two (2) extra response papers. The final grade will count the highest three submitted response papers. Response papers are not mere descriptions or summaries of the readings, but rather offer critiques and/or provide connections with studies from other weeks’ readings. Examples might include a critical evaluation of research design and suggestions for overcoming limitations, discussion on the assumptions of a theoretical approach, possible extensions of a theory, and/or critical evaluation of an empirical analysis. Response papers must engage with the required readings from the week, but may also include the suggested readings as well. Submitted response papers may be circulated in class to add to the discussion.

The required length of the response papers is between 600-800 words, double-spaced pages. The deadline for submission on turnitin.com is 4 PM on the Thursday before class. Late submissions will not be accepted. You may not submit more than one response paper per week. Submission of response papers must comply with the following schedule:

- One paper due between weeks 2-5
- One paper due between weeks 6-9
- One paper due between weeks 10-12

3.4 Policy Brief (20%)

Taking the role of policy analyst, your task is to prepare a concise and structured policy brief advising the head of a government agency (e.g. U.S. Department of State, Russian Ministry of Foreign Affairs, U.K. Department for International Development, etc.), an intergovernmental organization (e.g., UNICEF), or a transnational advocacy network (e.g., Greenpeace, Human Rights Watch, etc.) on why and how existing policy regarding a current world affairs issue should be changed and/or what new policy should be implemented. The objective of the policy brief is to encourage you to apply the theoretical frameworks and analytic approaches discussed in class to practical use. This brief should not be just a summary of the issue (assume that the reader watches the news), but rather a theoretically informed and evidence based analysis of current policy effectiveness and advice on new policy. The length of the policy brief is between 1,000-1,500 words, double-spaced pages. The policy brief must also include an executive summary of up to 200 words (does not count to overall word count). Be sure that the brief makes a clear argument, that it is focused, and that it is supported by theory and existing research in the literature. The deadline for submission on Blackboard is 6PM on Monday, November 16th.

3.5 Final essay (30%)

Students will be required to submit a long essay paper at the end of the term. The objective of the paper is to use a theoretical framework covered in the course to explain or analyze a chosen event or series of events from international politics. The paper must formulate a clear argument, discuss the main assumptions and predictions of the theoretical framework, and use it to analyze an event/series of events from international politics. More precisely, it needs to offer an informed discussion of the subject at hand and how existing theory can help us (or not) to understand it. The ultimate goal of the paper is to demonstrate your critical understanding of the class material, and to use of your analytical and reasoning skills to evaluate international affairs. The length of the paper should be 3,000 words (including reference list, footnotes, and title page), double-spaced pages. The deadline for submission on turnitin.com is 6 PM on Monday, December 21th.

4 Academic & Professional Ethics

Please do not plagiarize. Academic dishonesty is a serious matter, with serious consequences that can result in receiving no credit for an assignment, a failing grade for the module, and even expulsion from the programme. It is never permissible to turn in any work that contains others’ ideas without proper acknowledgment. It is your responsibility to make sure that your work meets the standard of academic honesty set forth in the College Calendar (see http://tcd-ie.libguides.com/plagiarism/calendar). If you are paraphrasing, cite the source. If you are quoting, use quotation marks and appropriate citation. Remember that academic integrity is a reflection of one’s character. In addition, we strongly recommend that you visit http://www.plagiarism.org/ for more information on what is and is not plagiarism. Lastly, students are required to only submit “new work” in each module, which means work that has not been submitted previously in any other university module. Students who wish to use previously submitted work as part of a new project will need the approval of the lecturer.

5 Syllabus Modification Rights

Please not that I reserve the right to reasonably alter the elements of the syllabus at any time. More often than not this will mean adjusting the readings to our pace in the seminar, or adding a small reading assignments as well.
6 Readings

Readings will be available on the Blackboard site of the course. This class does not have a textbook. Readings consist of peer-reviewed journal articles, book chapters, and articles from journals intended for wider audiences. Excellent introductions to the scientific study of international politics include the following:

7 Course Outline

Week 1 – Introduction to the Field
Week 2 – The Realist School
Week 3 – Power Parity Perspective
Week 4 – Rationalist Perspective
Week 5 – International Institutions
Week 6 – Domestic Groups and State Behavior
Week 7 – Study/Review Week
16 November 2020 – Policy brief due, 6PM
Week 8 – Domestic Institutions and State Behavior
Week 9 – Democratic Peace
Week 10 – Ideas, Culture, and Identity
Week 11 – Diffusion Processes in International Politics
Week 12 – International Norms and Transnational Networks
21 December 2020 – Final essay due, 6PM

8 Course Schedule

Week 1. Introduction to the Field

Required:
Week 2. The Realist School

Required:

Suggested:

Media:
- Kenneth Waltz in conversation with James Fearon (2011) [59:06]

Week 3. Power Parity Perspective

Required:
Suggested:

Media:

Week 4. Rationalist Perspective

Required:

Suggested:

Media:
• Robert McNamara on misunderstandings and the Vietnam War, excerpt from The Fog of War [2:40]
Week 5. International Institutions

Required:

Suggested:

Media:
- Robert Keohane (2004) “Conversations with History” [57:00]
- The Road to Europe (2003) – video file on Blackboard [1:01:15]

Week 6. Domestic Groups and State Behavior

Required:

Suggested:

Media:
- Andrew Moravcsik “Liberal Theory” [9:48]
- Robert McNamara on the Cuban Missile Crisis, excerpts from The Fog of War, Part 1 [9:41]; Part 2 [1:34]

Week 8. Domestic Institutions and State Behavior

Required:
and trade policy in the developing countries.” International organization, 59(1), 107-143.

Suggested:

Media
- How 'the special relationship’ shaped the world for the worse - with Jeremy Green [31:00]

Week 9. Democratic Peace

Required:
Politics, 52(1), 1-37.

Suggested:

Media:
- US Presidents and Democratic Peace Theory [2:20]

Week 10. Ideas, Culture, and Identity

Required:

Suggested:
Week 11. Diffusion Processes in International Politics

Required:

Suggested:

Week 12. International Norms and Transnational Networks

Required:

Suggested:

Media

- Isao Hashimoto “1945-1998” [14:24]
- George Perkovich (2014) “Taboo or Not Taboo: That is not the question”
- Oona Hathaway on US intervention in Syria [10:02]