Module Learning Outcomes with embedded Graduate Attributes	On successful completion of this module, students should be able to: LO1 Critically evaluate the theories and practices of Roman Republicanism. LO2 Critique modern historical and contemporary conceptions of Republicanism against their ancient antecedents. LO3 Analyse the key primary texts in their historical contexts. LO4 Demonstrate a critical understanding of the major theoretical approaches, debates, and scholarship relevant to the module topics. LO5 Discuss the above critically and independently, and express themselves both orally and in written form in a clear and scholarly manner. LO6 Work collaboratively and effectively in small groups.
Module Content	What is Roman Republicanism? Is it a set of values (liberty and the rule of law), a package of institutions (magistrates, senate, and assemblies), a canon of virtues (honour and service to the state), or a narrative (how political freedom is created and breaks down)? Since antiquity, interpreters have been using the Roman Republic to debate what it means to be truly free, the role of the people in decision-making, what ethical and responsible leadership looks like, the limits of free speech, and whether humans can reach their full potential only in political societies. In this module we will grapple with these Roman Republican debates by reading the key texts of Cicero and Livy, and tracing the reception of this body of thought in the writings of political philosophers and statesmen, such as Machiavelli and the American Founding Fathers.

Teaching and Learning Methods	This module is taught through eleven weekly 2-hr seminar discussions, with a substantial component of self-directed research and learning.
