

Residency Form for Trinity Joint Honours Students

To whom it may concern in the School of Languages, Literatures and Cultural Studies:

Pursuant to the following regulations in the Calendar for 2022/2023

(<https://www.tcd.ie/calendar/undergraduate-studies/trinity-joint-honours.pdf>):

10 Students following the pathway towards major, joint honours or minor awards in one or two modern language subjects other than English must normally spend not less than two months in the country of each language in order to fulfil the requirements of their course; students of Irish must spend not less than two months in the Gaeltacht. When determining which pathway to a minor subject they wish to follow, students should note that it is not possible to finish their study of a subject whilst abroad and will need to choose their pathway accordingly.

Students taking a modern language other than English must comply with the following regulations:

- If the Junior Sophister year is the final year in which the modern language subject is studied, then students must complete their residency requirement in that subject prior to completing their assessments in that year.
- If the Senior Sophister year is the final year in which the modern language subject is studied, then students must complete their residency requirement in that subject prior to completing their assessments in that year.

Note – it is not necessary for the time period spend abroad to be one continuous block: multiple stays which add up to cover the minimum are also acceptable.

I confirm in good faith that I have met these requirements, spending the specified period(s) in appropriate countries.

I understand that meeting this requirement is necessary for my degree, and also that the failure to meet the requirement is likely to disadvantage my language learning.
