IE TCD MS 10888: PAPERS OF ALBERT JOSEPH MCCONNELL

Description

The papers of Albert Joseph McConnell (AMC) cover the length of his career : academia in Trinity College Dublin (TCD); board membership of the School of Theoretical Physics, Dublin Institute for Advanced Studies (STP, DIAS); visiting professorships in Alexandria, London and Kuwait; administrative positions as TCD Registrar and Provost; and his post-retirement contacts with relatives and friends. Photographs and AMC's retirement speech as Provost document his early life in Ballymena. Much of the correspondence was generated by his wife Hilda Evelyn May McConnell (HMC), who also has diaries (1941-1965) and a scrapbook (1930s-1956) in the collection. The archive contains appointment diaries (1934-1991), the diary of a trip to France (1978) and draft speeches that include autobiographical information (1967-1975); correspondence (personal, academic and administrative) (1932-1992); material relating to HMC's motor accident (1964) and death (1966); mathematical papers (including lectures, draft examination papers, material on mathematician William Rowan Hamilton. amd drafts of an unattributed volume, 'An introduction to the principles of quantum mechanics') (1929-1976); examination papers for TCD (1931-1950) and National University of Ireland (1914-1947); financial documents (personal and relating to TCD) (1933-1978); matrial relating to TCD academic administration (1929-1974); photographs (late 19th c.-1991); publications (mostly mathematics and science) (1896-1991); audio-visual recordings; and miscellaneous artefacts.

Administrative history

AMC was born in Ballymena, Co. Antrim, to Presbyterians Joseph McConnell and Annie Orr (Corr in some sources). After completing his secondary school education at Ballymena Academy, he entered TCD on a scholarship, and was soon elected Foundation Scholar in Mathematics. In 1926 he graduated with a double moderatorship in mathematics and philosophy, won a gold medal for mathematics, was appointed University Student in Mathematics, and awarded the Bishop Law Prize. AMC took his doctorate in mathematics in Rome where he worked under Tullio Levi-Civita (1873-1941). Then began his academic career in TCD, becoming Lecturer of Mathematics (1929), Professor of Natural History (1929), Fellow (1930) and Professor of Applied Mathematics (1930). He was an external examiner for National University of Ireland (NUI), University of Edinburgh, and University of London, and visiting professor in Farouk University, Alexandria (1946-1947), University of London (1950) and Kuwait University (1970). AMC published in English and Italian; his works include 'Application of the absolute differential calculus' (1931), 'Application of tensor analysis' (1957), and the edition of 'The collected mathematical works of Sir William Rowan Hamilton. Vol. 2. Dynamics' (1940) with Arthur William Conway for the Royal Irish Academy (RIA). AMC was elected to RIA in 1930, becoming its vice-president in 1952. In 1934, AMC married HMC (1905-1966), a TCD graduate who was research assistant to historian Edmund Curtis on his

'Calendar of Ormond deeds' (1932-1943). HMC died in 1966 after a car accident in France (1964). AMC married long-time housekeeper of Provost's House, Jean McMillan Shekleton (1928-1985) in 1983. Taoiseach Éamon de Valera (1888-1975) founded DIAS in 1940, with Nobel Prize-winning physicist Erwin Schrödinger appointed director of its constituent STP. AMC was a founder member of the STP Board, and remained affiliated with DIAS for the rest of his life. AMC became a lifelong friend of de Valera, and his advisor in mathematics after Conway's death (de Valera was a graduate of, and teacher in mathematics, and retained a lifelong passion for the subject). This friendship would become important when AMC was appointed TCD Registrar (1950), then Provost (1952) and sought to bring TCD - widely considered a private, Protestant college - out of the social isolation it had suffered since Independence. His vision of TCD's place within a newly tolerant Ireland was expressed in a celebrated speech to the Blackrock Literary Debating Society, reported in 'The Irish Times' (24 October 1955). On his re-election as Taoiseach in 1951, De Valera ensured access to crucial grants after TCD had met sectarian resistance from Patrick McGilligan, Minister for Education in the previous Inter-Party Government. De Valera would later, as President, appoint AMC to the Council of State, the first member of the TCD Board so honoured. He would remain on the Council until 1991. AMC was the first non-Anglican Provost of TCD, and would become the longest serving for two centuries (he introduced compulsory retirement at 70 to the position, which before had been a life tenure). Under his Provostship, he brought much needed administrative reforms; began an ambitious programme of development, with the Moyne Institute of Preventive Medicine (1953) and Berkeley Library (1967) built, the Arts Building begun, Townley Hall acquired as an agricultural institute (1957), and the historical buildings renovated;saw the first female member of TCD Board (1958) and first female fellows (1967) elected, the ban on Catholic students attending TCD removed and the appointment of the college's first Catholic chaplain (1970); and survived the government's attempted merger of TCD with University College Dublin (1967). AMC retired to Killiney in 1974; he felt his administrative career had prevented him from fulfilling his promise in mathematics. AMC died in 1993.

IE TCD MS 10888/4/1 | Lectures | [c. 1929-1963]

File containing manuscript drafts of lectures given by Albert Joseph McConnell (AMC), presumably at Trinity College Dublin. AMC continued giving lectures after his appointment as Provost. There is little internal evidence for dating : 'Properties of the potential function at interior points' dates from [c. 1929-1937], 'Algebra' and 'Mathematics of electricity' probably from earlier; the rest, judging by documents found with the lectures, from [c. 1944, 1957-1963]. The lectures' titles are : 1. 'Advanced dynamics'; 2. 'Algebra'; 3. 'Conics'; 4. 'Electromagnetism'; 5. 'Hydrodynamics'; 6. 'Lectures on quantum mechanics'; 7. 'Mathematics of electricity'; 8. 'Meson theory'; 9. 'Newtonian or classical physics'; 10. 'Nuclear theory'; 11. 'Potential theory, electrostatics and magnetism'; 12. 'Properties of the potential function at interior points'; 13. 'Quantum mechanics'; 14. 'The steady electromagnetic field' (fragments); 15. 'Theory of relativity'; and 16. Untitled (from envelope with title 'Hamilton lecture').

IE TCD MS 10888/4/3 | Loose papers | [c. 1929-1976]

File containing loose mathematical papers of AMC. More research needs to be done on their status : some appear to be lecture notes, others calculations made before setting examination papers, or simply for pleasure. Some have headings (see below), most do not. File includes copy of calculations relating to Cornelius Lanczos, 'Matter waves and electricity', 'Physical review', vol. 61, nos. 11-12, 1942, 713-720. Headings on AMC loose mathematical papers : - 'Cylindrical co-ordinates'; - 'Electron on a central field'; - 'Formulae for potential of a point change'; - 'Laplace's theory of capillarity'; - 'A little about moments in 3 dimensions'; - 'Smythe : static and dynamic electricity'; and - 'Variational principles'.
