The licence that items under restriction are subject to is as follows:

TARA and Freedom of Information*
As a matter of normal practice we will only make your material available through TARA in accordance with the access restrictions you have placed upon it. However, please note that Trinity College Dublin is subject to the Freedom of Information Acts 1997 and 2003 and someone may make an application to the College under this legislation for access to material which is held by the College but not available through TARA under normal practice because of a restriction on access. In such circumstances, the College will evaluate the application in accordance with the terms of the legislation and would be obliged to grant access, unless it can be established that the material concerned is exempt from disclosure, or that the legislation does not apply to the material in question. Where the College refuses a request under the Freedom of Information legislation, the requester has the right of appeal to the Information Commissioner and the Courts.
