Finding Material:
As a copyright library with currently over six million items in formats ranging from manuscripts to online resources, it is important that you become familiar with the Library’s collections through the proper use of catalogues and search engines as early as possible. In SEARCH COLLECTIONS on our homepage, you will see the full range of these search tools.

Getting started:
To get an overview of recommended resources, as well as subject librarian contact details, select Subject Librarian (Education) from the homepage. You may need to view other guides depending on your specialty.

STELLA search is the main library discovery tool acting as both catalogue to our collections and gateway to other external online resources. It is a keyword based search engine and allows you to search for books (including e-books), journals, journal articles and much more. There is a basic and advanced mode available. To limit your search results to our collection, select the Library catalogue only facet under the REFINE BY column on the left hand side of the results page. BOOKS: When you locate a book title of interest, simply click on the title for more information such as location and number of copies available. Books are either on the open shelves or in closed access (Stacks/Storage). The main Education collection is located in the Lecky library (lower level) at 370 (see Menu/Floorplans on the homepage for layout). If open shelf books are on loan to other readers, use the Reserve it function to place a hold/reservation on that item. Closed access items, which can be consulted by undergraduates and borrowed by postgraduates, are requestable online using the option Request stack item.

Otherwise, use call slips if indicated. These are available in the Library.

To explore other categories within your results page (e.g. theses, dvds, ebooks), first ensure you select Library Catalogue Only, then select the FORMAT facet.

JOURNALS: STELLA search uniquely facilitates JOURNAL ARTICLE searching. Type in the article title and follow the links. If the pdf or html icons are not readily available, follow the link resolver indicated by a square TCD logo or Check TCD e-journals button to get to the full text. (Please report broken links to curranlo@tcd.ie). TIP!: If your search is unsuccessful type in the JOURNAL TITLE and review options for online and print editions. Open shelf print journals are shelved at 370 in the Ussher Library basement but the majority are in Stacks. Use call slips to request these. Delivery from Santry stacks takes one day, campus stacks 1.5 hours. For further help, ask counter staff, email me (see over) or if unavailable, email library@tcd.ie. When you are off-campus, you will need your College username/password to access subscribed resources. If you encounter access problems relating to your password contact IT Services (itservicedesk@tcd.ie).

Open access or freely available research material is also available. See SEARCH COLLECTIONS for TARA (Trinity’s research repository) or RIAN (all Ireland university research portal). THESSES: This is fully described under Support and Training, Finding theses. See also the online tutorial on Finding a thesis. For a complete listing of TCD education theses in the library, type Education into STELLA, next choose Library catalogue only and under Format, select the TCD thesis category. You can also search by author, title or degree title e.g. Education, Ph.D. (N.B. Masters not held in library after 2012).

DATABASES AND E-BOOKS

Databases contain valuable information particularly when you are carrying out a literature review. As mentioned earlier, many are now searched via STELLA but not all. The majority provide peer-reviewed, scholarly content and formats range from purely journal and e-book content to mixtures of materials. The main education databases ERIC, British Education Index and the Australian Education Index provide references and abstracts of govt. publications, theses, reports, conf. proceedings and journal articles. Full text links are embedded where available. A general tip for database use is to always register with the database provider to save your results and to avail of useful features such as research Alerts or updates. Use HELP sections to improve searching and the Thesaurus (Subject Terms) if provided, to ensure your search terms are optimized. Youtube videos on searching particular databases are also useful (mention platform e.g. “ERIC on EBSCO” or “ERIC on PROQUEST”). Finally, to get material not held in our collections, ask about inter-library loans (now online) and/or the ALCID reader card (postgraduates) to access other university libraries to consult material.

UK copyright E-books

The Library now receives UK “legal deposit” books mostly in soft copy. This category of E-book provide current titles and can only be consulted within the Library on library pcs. 5% can be printed. Ask for assistance.

NEW! Use Library laptops to navigate and search the library website. Borrow within the Library from the Berkeley basement.
