Memoirs of a Polar Bear

By Yoko Tawada

Translated by Susan Bernofsky from the German (by way of Japanese) and published by Portobello, Memoirs of a Polar Bear follows three generations of a polar bear family as they reflect on life and try to come to terms with the human society which they find themselves living amongst.

“A study of blurred lines: the line between human and animal, the line between one person’s story and another’s, the line between love and exploitation. [...] ‘Memoirs’ hums with beautiful strangeness.” – R. Asubel , The New York Times
