

Hello,

I propose we rename the Berkeley Library as the 'Pomodoro Library'.

The bronze globe outside the Berkeley Library was created by an Italian sculptor with the surname Pomodoro. So it would be fitting to have the library named Pomodoro because of that as it is directly outside the library.

As well as that, a widely-known study technique is called the 'Pomodoro Technique', and what do students do in a library? Study!

Kind regards,
Hartely