

POU11034 — Politics and Popular Culture B

Module Information
Module Code	POU11034
Module Title	Politics and Popular Culture B
Department	Political Science
Year Group	Junior Fresh
Module Personnel	Dr Sotirios Karampampas
Academic Year	2026-27
Credit Weighting	5 credits
Semester	Semester 2
Contact Hours	One 2-hours lecture per week One 1-hour tutorial per fortnight

Module Content
Module Description	This module examines the political dimensions of popular culture in international and transnational contexts. Moving beyond the nation-state, it explores how films, TV series, music, digital media, memes, sports and fandoms participate in global power relations, shape political imaginaries, and circulate ideologies across borders. Students will engage with cultural forms through themes including nationalism, postcolonialism, global capitalism, migration, protest, and humanitarianism. They will critically engage with cultural texts and trends to understand how popular culture functions as both a site of domination and resistance in world politics. The module combines theoretical perspectives from international relations and cultural studies with empirical case studies, enabling students to critically analyse how popular culture both shapes and reflects the global political order.
Module Learning Aims	The module aims to - Introduce students to the theoretical and empirical study of popular culture within international politics. - Develop a critical understanding of how global cultural forms reflect, reinforce, or resist political power across borders.

Module Content

	- Equip students with the analytical tools to interpret cultural artefacts, global cultural trends, and everyday practices of cultural consumption. - Foster comparative thinking about how popular culture operates across different geopolitical, economic and institutional contexts. - Encourage students to engage critically and reflexively with their own cultural environments as sites of political meaning.
Learning Outcomes	Upon successful completion of the module, students will be able to - Identify and explain key theoretical approaches to the study of global popular culture in international politics. - Critically analyse how cultural texts/artifacts (e.g. films, series, music, memes) engage with global political issues such as nationalism, authoritarianism, war and migration. - Assess the role of popular culture in the projection of soft power and the construction of geopolitical identities. - Examine how digital media, fandoms, and cultural industries shape protest cultures and global imaginaries. - Communicate complex arguments about cultural politics clearly in written and oral forms. - Reflect on their own media engagement in relation to global political structures and cultural narratives.
Indicative Reading / Resources	Campbell, J. R. (2023). The politics and international relations of fantasy films and television: To win or die. Springer Nature. Crothers, L. (2021), Globalisation and American popular culture. 5th edition. Rowman & Littlefield. Dittmer, J., & Bos, D. (2019). Popular culture, geopolitics, and identity. 2nd edition. Rowman & Littlefield. Miller T. (eds.) (2015). The Routledge companion to global political culture. Routledge. Sachleben, M. A. (2014), World politics on screen: Understanding international relations through popular culture. The University Press of Kentucky.

Assessment
Assessment Components	Tutorial Attendance and Discussion Points 10%, Mid-Term Essay 40%, Final Essay 50%
Assessment Details	- Tutorial Attendance and Discussion Points 10% Students are required to submit discussion points for 4 out of 5 tutorials across the module.

Additional Information
Prerequisites	None
Co-requisites	POU11033 – Politics and Popular Culture A
Any other information	