

POU44683 — Contemporary Political Theory A

Module Information
Module Code	POU44683
Module Title	Contemporary Political Theory A
Department	Political Science
Year Group	Senior Sophister
Module Personnel	Peter Stone
Academic Year	2026-27
Credit Weighting	5 credits
Semester	Semester 1
Contact Hours	2 hours of classroom time per week

Module Content
Module Description	This module will introduce students to contemporary debates in political theory, with a focus upon democracy.
Learning Outcomes	Upon completion of this module, it is expected that students should be able to: • Acquired a detailed understanding of some of the principal debates and trends in modern political theory. • Become familiar with the basic concepts of political theory and the problems raised by their application. • Learned the difference between empirical and normative theory, as well as the interrelationship between the two. • Developed skill at constructing, analysing, and critiquing political arguments. • Applied argumentative skill both in the classroom and in written coursework. • Reflected upon the implications of political theory for life outside of the classroom.

Assessment
Assessment Components	Point Presentation: 15% Short Paper: 25% Final Paper: 60%

Additional Information

Prerequisites

None

Co-requisites

None