

Working clinically with "hard to reach" populations

Ben Butlin

Lecture & Lecturer Overview

Ben Butlin is a Clinical Psychologist and an Assistant Professor at the school of Psychology, Trinity College Dublin. Over the past fifteen years he has specialised in working with "hard to reach" populations, primarily children and families where the child is at risk or currently placed, in custody or care settings. His research focuses on the development and evaluation of innovative interventions for socially excluded families.

The talk will provide a grounding in the psycho-social difficulties commonly experienced by children in care, a synopsis of intervention development over the past forty years, the common clinical challenges and future directions for the field.
