1. DISCLAIMER

Please note that the General Regulations have primacy over departmental handbook information. Always consult the College Calendar for accuracy.

‘During the registration process, all students will confirm, among other things, that they have been provided with a link to the Board’s general regulations for students and that they are applying for registration in accordance with the provisions of such regulations. Students must ensure that they are familiar with both the general regulations and the more detailed school or department regulations.

In the event of any conflict or inconsistency between the general regulations and school, department or course handbooks, the provisions of the general regulations shall prevail’.

(§12, H4, College Calendar 2013-14)

5. OVERVIEW OF DEGREE PROGRAMMES

You can study Sociology either within the Business, Economic and Social Studies programme (BESS), Two Subject Moderatorship programme (TSM), Sociology and Social Policy programme (SocSocPol) or Philosophy, Political Science, Economics and Sociology (PPES). Each programme has a specific set of module requirements as listed below.

All Michaelmas Term modules are assessed by means of essays and other types of coursework (such as individual or group presentations) and all Hilary Term modules primarily, if not exclusively, by three-hour written examinations in May.

BESS module choices

In the Junior Freshman (first) year, you must take six modules. Each module has 10 ECTS credits. The following five modules are mandatory:

BU1510	Introduction to Organisation and Management
EC1010	Introduction to Economics
EC1030	Mathematics and Statistics
PO1600	Introduction to Political Science
SO1310	Introduction to Sociology

In addition, you choose one of the following: FR1040 French, GR1004 German, SP1018 Spanish, RUF100 Russian, RUF603 Introduction to Central, East European and Russian area studies, PLF100 Polish, LA1240 Introduction to Law, or SS1765 Social Policy Concepts/The Irish Welfare State.

In the Senior Freshman (second) year, you must choose modules equivalent to 60 ECTS credits from the following list. Each module has 10 ECTS credits with the exception of SS2139 and, subject to programme requirements, may be taken in conjunction with a Broad Curriculum course (5 ECTS) offered under the auspices of the Broad Curriculum:

6. ECTS

ECTS is the European Credit Transfer and Accumulation System, which facilitates standardization of university education across Europe with work of equal worth getting the equivalent amount of ECTS.

All modules have an ECTS measure allocated to them and the standard undergraduate module value at TCD is 10 ECTS for first, second and third year modules and 15 ECTS for fourth year modules. All modules are semesterised.

The normal annual workload at Trinity College is 60 ECTS.

Students going abroad on Erasmus and non-EU international exchanges also take modules to the equivalent of 60 ECTS, especially when these are offered through English. The minimum requirement for a full-year exchange is 45 ECTS and 22.5 ECTS for half a year abroad. Students are strongly advised to take more than the minimum 45 ECTS in case of failure in some elements.

TSM students participating in a full year exchange must obtain a minimum 22.5 credits in each subject in order to rise with their year; TSM students participating in a half-year exchange must obtain a minimum of 10 ECTS in each subject while abroad (and 15 ECTS in each subject in the semester they are in Trinity).

7. MODULE CHOICE REGISTRATION

Before you proceed into Senior Freshman, Junior Sophister and Senior Sophister year, you are required to register your module choices. Completed module choice forms must be returned to the Department of Sociology Office by the date that will be advised to you (usually mid-April). The lecture timetable for the new academic year will be arranged during the summer months on the basis of the module choices submitted. Students are advised to consider carefully their module choices before submitting them to the Sociology department.

8. E-MAIL CORRESPONDENCE

All email correspondence from the Department of Sociology will be sent to TCD email addresses only. There may be occasions where staff need to re-schedule meetings and classes and it is therefore imperative to check your email daily as part of your work routine.

9. SOCIOLOGY MODULE OUTLINES

The following pages give you a detailed outline of each of the modules available in Sociology. Generally, in first year (Junior Freshman), we aim to show you something of what Sociology as an empirical discipline can reveal about contemporary society. Second year modules build on this foundation and provide a framework for understanding social change and inequality in the world today. One module introduces the main methods of social research, concentrating on the practical skills needed to carry out research. Third and fourth year modules are more thematic and make more use of seminars and workshops. You start to acquire specialist sociological skills and tackle particular areas of the discipline.

If you are taking Sociology as a major component of your degree you must also do an undergraduate dissertation. This gives you a chance to carry out research on a topic of your choice. It is perhaps the single most exciting part of your degree.

The generic skills and competencies sociology graduates should possess in addition to the content knowledge of your respective degree programme include:

- (a) the ability to critically read and analyse written texts as well as numerical data and graphs;
- (b) the ability to express your ideas well in written and spoken form and to apply concepts and ideas to different contexts;
- (c) teamwork, peer-evaluation, self-evaluation and intercultural competencies to operate in an increasingly globalised world;
- (d) research skills to explore contemporary society and to allow you to put theoretical concepts into practice;

These skills and competences are reflected in the module outlines, learning objectives and different assessment techniques below.

Title:	SO1310/1311 Introduction to Sociology (10 ECTS)
Module Content/Outline:	This module introduces students to the discipline of Sociology. Sociology enables us to understand and critically explore the social world in which we live. The module introduces students to the distinctive questions that sociologists ask about human society, and the theories, concepts and analytical tools used in the search for answers. Students are encouraged to develop a 'sociological imagination' in order to understand the inter-relationships and dependencies between the individual, society and wider global processes. The module considers the nature of sociology in terms of its historical origins, its key theoretical traditions and the role of research in analysing social issues. It examines major themes such as multiculturalism and citizenship; migration and immigrant incorporation; racism, identities and education; the changing role of families; the changing nature of work; the emergence of knowledge economies; network societies; social inequalities and change; gender; the social construction of reality. The themes are pursued in relation to Ireland, Europe and processes of globalisation. In particular the rapid social and cultural change that has occurred in Irish society in recent decades is examined.
Lecturer(s):	Dr Daniel Faas and Dr Elaine Moriarty
Learning Objectives:	Students successfully completing the module should be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Demonstrate a general knowledge of Sociology as a discipline, outline the chronology of the main periods of development of human society, and recognise the canonical theorists referred to in the module; • Discuss and engage in key sociological topics such as migration, education, identities, inequalities, gender, organizations and networks, and explain why these themes have attracted the interest of sociologists and what the main challenges are; • Compare and contrast different theoretical perspectives on key dimensions of society • Identify and apply sociological theories to real world social phenomena, particularly the case of Ireland and assess the strengths and weaknesses of the selected theories in relation to particular aspects of Irish society; • Compare and contrast the main quantitative and qualitative methods in the research process; • Articulate an informed and independent argument in essays, discussions and examination questions.
Lectures & Tutorials/ Contact hours:	Two lectures and one tutorial per week
Workload:	Lectures: 44 hrs; Tutorials: 22 hrs; Exams/assignments: 44 hrs; Self-study: 140 hrs. Total: 250 hours.

Recommended Texts/ Key Reading:	The main textbook recommended for purchase is: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Macionis J. and K. Assessment Date for submission Penalties for late submission	Essay (30%) Annual exam (70%) Attendance at tutorials is compulsory. Failure to attend at least half of the tutorials will automatically result in a 10% (one full grade) deduction from the overall module grade. Thursday 11th December 2014 (essay) Without an authorised extension, the mark given will be lowered by one grade
Examination	1 x 3-hour examination

Title:	SO2310 Introduction to Social Research (10 ECTS)
Module Content/Outline:	This module is designed to introduce students to the principles and methods of quantitative (Part I) and qualitative research (Part II). This module has several primary objectives: one goal is to familiarise students with the different methods employed in quantitative and qualitative research. The second is to provide a number of practical, applied tools during the course of the two semesters and to give students an opportunity to practice and implement these tools. The fourth is to read and discuss work by quantitative and qualitative researchers, especially focusing on the lessons they learned and the challenges they faced. The final goal is to help students understand how to move from project design, to project implementation, to data analysis and reporting in both quantitative and qualitative research.
Lecturer(s):	Dr Mark Ward and Dr Carmen Frese
Learning Objectives:	Students successfully completing the module should be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Describe the range of tools used in quantitative and qualitative social research; • Select and apply appropriate research methods for investigating social phenomena; • Assess the strength and weaknesses of selected methodologies; • Collect, analyse and report quantitative and qualitative data appropriately; • Summarise and critically discuss sociological research reports and publication.
Lectures &Tutorials/ Contact hours:	Two lectures and one tutorial per week
Workload:	Lectures: 44 hrs; Tutorials: 22 hrs; Exams/assignments: 44 hrs; Self-study: 140 hrs. Total: 250 hours.

Title:	SO2330 European Societies (10 ECTS)
Module Content/Outline:	This module examines different forms of social inequality in Western Europe – the divisions of class, gender, ethnicity and life cycle. It considers the extent to which the European Union involves a European social model of social cohesion – a particularly European way of countering the divisions of a market society. The module uses comparative studies as well as case studies from selected European countries.
Lecturer(s):	Dr Peter Mühlau and Dr Alicja Bobek
Learning Objectives:	On successful completion of this module, you will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Outline the main sociological theories of social structure relevant to contemporary Europe; • Describe and explain the main differences in social structure between European societies; • Assess the main debates about the development of the European Union and European society.

Title:	SO2343 Gender, Work and Family (10 ECTS)
Module Content/Outline:	The first half of the module looks at how gender shapes the organisation of work and family life. It introduces theoretical explanations for these gender differences, and examines them in areas such as education, work, poverty, housework, childcare and policies. Many examples are from Ireland, where there have been remarkable changes in gender and work in the past 20 years. The module also presents examples from other Western countries. The second half of the module builds on the first by examining in detail one specific domain where relations between men and women have taken diverse forms across different societies: the family. Has the nuclear family always held the position it currently enjoys as the most dominant family form in Western societies? Or does a more historical perspective reveal different, not-so-nuclear family arrangements in the past? Further, the module examines the so-called ‘crisis’ now facing the conjugal family unit in contemporary societies due to a proliferation of ‘new family forms’. Is the institution of the family as fragile as some would suggest (rising divorce rates are often cited as evidence of this) or is it far more resilient that we give it credit for (the continued popularity of marriage is often cited as evidence of this)? These questions, and more, are pursued by examining change and continuity to families with reference to Ireland, Europe, North America, and Africa.
Lecturer(s):	Dr Fran McGinnity, Prof Helen Russell and Dr David Ralph
Learning Objectives:	On successful completion of the module, you will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Outline the main theories explaining gender differences in work and family life; • Engage with concepts such as occupational segregation, the gender wage gap, glass ceiling, work-life conflict; • Understand factors underlying the remarkable changes in gender and work in Ireland in the past 20 years; • Outline different theories of the family from Functionalist, Marxist and Feminist perspectives; • Approach the family as a social institution from a historical as well as a contemporary sociological perspective; • Discuss the ‘family values crisis’ debate and assess whether there is evidence for as much continuity as there is change to the modern family’s form and function.

Title:	SO2350 Power, State and Social Movements (10 ECTS)
Module Content/Outline:	Political sociology is concerned with the social bases of politics and the relationship between states and societies. Through examining the nature of power, states, the policy process and social movements, this module provides sociological insights into the world of politics, policy and social change. The first part of the module introduces students to the major ideas and debates within the field of political sociology and provides them with some of the tools needed to analyse power, politics and the state. In particular, it examines interactions between economic interests, political institutions, and ideological norms. The module has equally strong theoretical and empirical components and aims to expand students' knowledge of society and politics in a number of countries. Topics include power, the nature of the state and democracy, political culture and participation, the organization and representation of interests and gender in politics. The second half of the module focuses on social movements, examining them on the macro, meso and micro levels. We look at the broader context of social movements and whether they are best characterized as challenges to the status quo or a means of institutionalizing and channeling any such challenges. We study how social movements work and what they achieve. We also look at why people get involved and stay involved in movements dedicated to social change. There is a strong practical element to the module, with visiting speakers from social movements in Ireland discussing their own movement activities.
Lecturer(s):	Dr Camilla Devitt and Dr David Landy
Learning Objectives:	On successful completion of this module, you will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Relate a theoretical understanding of power and the state to policy making and challenges in Ireland; • Discuss sociological explanations of political processes • Relate this theoretical understanding to empirical data and analyses of more than two advanced democracies; • Compare and contrast competing approaches in the field; • Discuss key theoretical questions relating to social movements and a 'politics from below': framing, recruitment, mobilisation, institutionalisation, and identity in movements; • Apply this theoretical understanding to the practices of social movements in Ireland and elsewhere.

Title:	SO3201 Social Theory (10 ECTS)
Module Content/Outline:	The first part of this module examines some of the key theoretical issues in sociology. In Michaelmas Term the class will be introduced to some key theorists, both from the ‘classical’ and the more ‘contemporary’ periods, and will explore how these theorists have addressed core themes in sociological inquiry. The course will explore how social theories seek to explain social change, and critically examine ideas about the individual and society, social conflict, and the nature of sociology. The class will look at the work of Marx, Durkheim, Weber, Parsons, Foucault, Giddens and Bourdieu, and examine the concepts of functionalism, conflict theory, social interactionism, symbolic interactionism, cultural capital and habitas. The focus in Hilary Term changes to contemporary social theory. The course identifies core issues in the theory used in sociology and the conceptual devices which have emerged to solve them using examples from sociological research. Students are taught how to deploy these concepts and mechanisms to provide insight into different sociological phenomena. The course provides students with a structured understanding of what makes a social theory sociological: an ability to integrate social pressures or expectations into models of human behaviour and in so doing provide understanding and explanation of how social coordination and cooperation can both emerge and dissipate. This course will provide students with a toolkit of social concepts and processes with which they can build powerful hypotheses to understand and explain phenomena in the social sciences.
Lecturer(s):	Dr Jemimah Bailey and Professor Richard Layte
Learning Objectives:	On successful completion of this module, you will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Apply different sociological perspectives to various aspects of social life; • Critically assess the texts examined during the course; • Outline the key debates in social theory; • Conduct comparative analysis of theorists’ main ideas; • Critically assess the explicit and implicit theories deployed in empirical sociological research; • Have available a toolkit of conceptual devices and processes that can be used to explain social phenomena; • Understand post-structural and postcolonial theory and their critique of ideographic social science; (ie social science as the attempt to deduce universal laws on the natural science model); • Understand the relationship between knowledge and power; • Understand the reflexive turn in sociological work on governance, the state and knowledge production; <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Understand the implications of the foregoing for scholarly writing.

Title:	SO3230 Globalization and Development (10 ECTS)
Module Content/Outline:	Part I: Theories of Globalization The first part of this module deals with theories of globalization. Globalization and Development are two much discussed and debated concepts. How should we understand and address them today? How are they linked? What are the trends in both globalization and development? How is our understanding of both globalization and development changing in light of the recent global economic crisis and persistent systemic weaknesses? Can an institutionalist approach improve thinking and practice in development? We will investigate the trends that are going to shape the world in the coming decades: increased interconnectedness, crises in existing economic, political and social institutions within nations and internationally; increasing pressure on natural resources; huge demographic shifts; a shifting in the geo-political balance of power, specifically the rise of China and India. Part II: Body Matters in Globalization and Development Development and Globalization are too often dealt with as abstract concepts within abstract theories, and sometimes it can be difficult to connect them to human experience and human collectivities on the ground. In this module we look at how and why the human body and human culture matter in globalization and development. The biological experiences of birth, reproduction and death are central to a person's experience of development and globalization, and are embedded in social institutions, as is the no less important reproduction of culture, including religion. What happens to the dominant theories of development and globalization when these body and soul matters are put centre stage?
Lecturer(s):	Dr Anne Holohan
Learning Objectives:	Students successfully completing this module will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Think critically about globalization and development issues as posed in the world today; • Understand the relationship between the economy, society and politics, in theory and in practice in relation to globalization and development; • Understand how globalization is impacting developed countries, the BRIC countries and the poorest countries; • Critique dominant neo-liberal economic approaches to development and globalization; • Analyze institutions at the macro-, meso- and micro-level of development; • Understand the role of breastfeeding, menstruation and access to toilets in development in a globalized world; • Analyze the role of culture, in particular, religion, in development in a globalized world

Title:	SO3240 Researching Society (10 ECTS)
Module Content/Outline:	This module provides students with the knowledge and practical skills necessary to pursue a wide range of social research. It serves both as a free-standing module and as preparation for students to conduct original research and complete a research dissertation in their Senior Sophister year. Part I of the module builds on the broad introduction to social research in second year, which explored the range of techniques employed in qualitative methods, overviewed basic methods of qualitative analysis and began the process of developing written arguments. In particular the module will focus on designing and formulating a research project with corresponding sampling, data collection and analysis methods. This part of the module will also particularly focus on research proposal requirements. Part II of the module continues on from the introduction to quantitative methods in second year, which covered survey design, sampling, data collection techniques and basic descriptive analysis methods. The various stages of designing a quantitative research project are examined with particular focus on data analysis. As generalisations from the sample to the population are of key importance in quantitative research, statistical inference is introduced and inferential statistics are applied. This is accompanied by instruction in using SPSS software to analyse numerical data.
Lecturer(s):	Dr Daniel Faas and Dr Mark Ward
Learning Objectives:	Students successfully completing this module will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Design a social research project; • Formulate appropriate research questions; • Select and justify the most appropriate research method to answer particular research questions; • Discuss the advantages and disadvantages of various research methods; • Distinguish and apply suitable types of analysis to varying research designs; • Apply appropriate ethical standards to research design; • Read and critically discuss published research.

Title	SO3250 Race, Ethnicity and Identity (10 ECTS)
Module Content/Outline:	The module provides an overview of issues surrounding race, ethnicity and racism, by providing a theoretical understanding of the issues and investigating recent developments in immigration, racism, and the politics of multiculturalism and integration, in Ireland, Europe and further afield. Part I of the module – Race and Ethnicity: A theoretical introduction – offers a broad theoretical introduction to the questions surrounding race and racism, and examines how these issues are discussed in public life. This section explores how ideas of race and identity are constructed, and how these concepts have affected the modern world. Students will gain an overview of various approaches to 'race', an understanding of how it is reported, and learn to situate race and ethnicity within social, political and economic processes. We will examine sociological theories of race and racism, learn how to analyse media representations of race and ethnicity and investigate the concepts of multiculturalism and integration. We will discuss the impact of Islamophobia and the prevalence of colonial discourse in a globalised world. Finally, we will ask if it is possible to move 'beyond race' and look at the possibilities and the problems of anti-racism. Part II of the module – States, Migration and Ethnicity – aims to promote further reflection on the interactions between states, identity, ethnicity and race. First, building on Part I, we will examine social constructions of race and racism, before investigating theories on identity and the origins of nationalism. We will then move to an exploration of how immigration is affecting contemporary West European politics and society. We will cover the topics of citizenship policies, immigrant 'integration' and the role of the state, the rise of far right parties and immigrant protests and riots. The module ends with a comparative examination of immigration in the United States and Europe.
Lecturer(s):	Dr Elaine Moriarty and Dr Camilla Devitt
Learning Objectives:	On successful completion of this module, you will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Critically theorise and contextualise race and ethnicity with reference to culture, state, gender, nation, and globalisation; • Critically analyse media representations of race and ethnicity; • Apply a race critical theory approach with particular reference to Ireland; • Discuss recent developments in relation to immigration, racism and citizenship; • Critically discuss theories of identity and nationalism;

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Compare and contrast immigration, citizenship and integration regimes in Western Europe; • Explain and discuss the implications of migrant protests and riots in Western Europe; • Account for the development of extreme right parties and groups in Western Europe.

Title:	SO3260 Social Inequality (10 ECTS)
Module Content/Outline:	The first part of the module examines the causes and consequences of social inequality in Irish and European society. It describes the nature and extent of social inequality in areas such as education, health, social capital or crime victimization. While the main emphasis is on the economic basis of social inequality, the module also looks at the intersection between class and gender/ethnic inequalities and looks specifically at the intergenerational transmission of inequality. In the second part of the module, leading researchers in Ireland introduce selected areas of inequality research, their policy context and familiarises students with the main issues and findings in these research areas.
Lecturer(s):	Dr Peter Mühlau and ESRI staff
Learning Objectives:	Students successfully completing the module will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Describe social inequalities in Irish society and compare that with the situation in other advanced industrial societies; • Critically discuss and evaluate the evidence for theories of causes of social inequality; • Critically discuss and evaluate the evidence for theories of consequences of social inequality; • Identify and discuss the policy implication of research findings in inequality research.

Title:	SO4200 Sociology/Social Policy Dissertation (15 ECTS)
Module Content/Outline:	The dissertation is available to single honours majors in sociology, final year TSM majors and Sociology and Social Policy students. It involves writing a dissertation of 12,000-15,000 words. Students work with an individual supervisor drawing on a research proposal completed as part of the Junior Sophister Researching Society module. Part I of the fortnightly seminar (Michaelmas Term) discusses thematic issues including how to formulate research questions, how to write a literature review, how to structure a dissertation and how to connect theory, methodology and data. Part II (Hilary Term) is based on individual presentations of students' work in progress including problems encountered.
Lecturer(s):	Dr Daniel Faas
Learning Objectives:	Students successfully completing the module will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Identify a sociological topic or problem and formulate appropriate research question(s) to answer it; • Critically discuss and synthesise relevant literature and link it with your research problem; • Discuss and reflect on your research methodology including ethical issues; • Analyse data and link new original findings to existing literature and theoretical aspects; • Discuss and reflect on your work-in-progress through individual in-class presentations; • Demonstrate the research skills required to carry out postgraduate research; • Write a dissertation to professional standards.
Lectures & Tutorials/ Contact hours:	One hour per fortnight attendance at dissertation seminar, plus regular contact with supervisor (see dissertation guidelines).

Title:	SO4230 Economic Sociology of Europe (15 ECTS)
Module Content/Outline:	Part I – Issues in Employment and Economic Sociology – provides students with a systematic introduction to two central and rapidly changing aspects of labour markets in advanced market economies, the increasing participation and changing position of women and the role of migrants and the problem of their socio-economic integration. In the first part of the module which deals with the position of women on the labour market, theories and empirical findings regarding the divisions of paid and unpaid labour, labour market participation of women and wage and career inequality are discussed with a special emphasis on the interplay of individual decisions and formal and informal societal institutions. The second part focuses on migrant workers on the labour market. In this part, the module discusses different types of migrants and the associated economic benefits, the impact of migrants on the domestic labour market, patterns of socio-economic integration and the underlying processes and the attitudes of the host population towards migrants. Further, the modules deals with issues arising from economic inequality and its impact on the fabric of contemporary society. Part II – Markets, States and Work – introduces students to important concepts, theories and empirical research in economic sociology and the sociology of work. The first section of the module discusses classical interpretations of the rise of ‘market society’ before analysing different systems of capitalism and welfare in Europe and the role of the state in shaping economies and societies and responding to pressures for institutional change. The second section focuses on contemporary experiences of work and unemployment in Western Europe, including the relationship between skills and work, services work, flexible work and the impact of ‘globalisation’ on work. In particular, we engage with debates on change and continuity in working lives in ‘post-industrial’ Europe. Finally, in the third section, Western European labour markets are analysed through the prism of labour migration. We examine policies on high skilled and low skilled labour immigration, as well as foreign workers’ experiences in different labour markets.
Lecturer(s):	Dr Peter Mühlau and Dr Camilla Devitt
Learning Objectives:	Students successfully completing the module will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Relate classical interpretations of market society with contemporary experiences at work; • Compare and contrast and critically analyse different forms of capitalism in Western Europe; • Engage in debates on the future of welfare states; • Critically analyse theories of change and continuity in

Title:	SO4253 Conflict Studies (15 ECTS)
Module Content/Outline:	There is a renewed interest in sociology and anthropology among liberal interventionists and peacemakers. Sociology and anthropology are seen by the peacemakers as providing added value to a prevailing emphasis on ‘good governance’ and state-building as the way to resolve conflict. This module argues that the role for sociology/anthropology imagined by the purveyors of good governance is a reprise of our traditional role as the begetters of knowledge whereby the West manages the non-West. Rather than service ‘good governance’, this module seeks to develop a reflexive critique of it. In part one (the first semester) we will develop the conceptual and methodological tools to understand and dismantle the ‘good governance’ approach to liberal intervention. In part two (second semester) we will use these tools to explore in some detail particular techniques of ‘good governance’/peacebuilding/liberal intervention; eg equality legislation and ethnic statistics, human rights, truth and reconciliation, consociation and power-sharing, community relations work, the Human Terrain System. We also consider the implications for practice of our critique. The ultimate aim of the reflexive critique is to glimpse a possibility that the liberal interventionist, because of his position as the self-appointed universal arbiter of peace, cannot; i.e. that Western techniques of ‘good governance’ may create and reproduce the communal violence to which they claim to be the solution. This module has a serious theoretical orientation, but the empirical touchstone is the peace process in Ireland. Reference will be made to other peace agreements and students are encouraged to develop case studies that particularly interest them, making links with other modules and wider reading.

Title:	SO4291 Social Networks and Digital Lives (15 ECTS)
Module Content/Outline:	Over one in three people on the planet is already connected to the Internet and millions more become connected every month. This course looks at what are the implications for our everyday lives, and for the institutions and norms which shape how we live, of the increased connectedness of our age. The technology is changing as are some aspects of social behavior, but much of how people behave is unchanged; partly because increased connectivity is merely an amplification of long-existing needs and behavior, but also because technology is but a tool and people will use it in unpredictable ways. This course places digital technologies in their socio-political-historical context, explores the ideas around networks and examines how core institutions (work, the economy, the media, government, family, politics) and norms (privacy, sharing, feeling rules) — are being impacted by new technologies. We will assess just how revolutionary the emergence of electronically-generated and -reinforced social networks are. In Part I, we will explore the structure and features of social networks and their implications for collective behavior from revolution to raves. At the societal and international level, we ask where does power lie on the Internet? Are old powerful institutions (states, firms) being challenged successfully by newer ones such as Wikileaks and peer production? Are individuals like Bradley Manning and Edward Snowden heroes or traitors? Are achieving the goals of social movements and revolutions easier with technologies? Or harder? How are changing norms around privacy and sharing contributing to the shifts in production and power brought about by Big Data and surveillance? Does the Internet serve authoritarianism as well as democracy? We look at the implications of social networks and digital technology on work and employment and explore the role of gaming in this and other spheres. We also consider the implications of those changes in terms of wealth and equality for those on both sides of both kinds of digital divide: access and differing levels of skills. In Part 2, we focus more on meso- and micro- level institutions. We ask what is social netiquette? How is it evolving? We will look at how people are navigating the social dilemmas that emerge with the integration of technology and connectedness into their waking and sleeping lives. What does privacy mean and the presentation of self are considered, as is anti-social behaviour and the emerging institutions to deal with it. We look at sexuality, death, creativity and crime online to reconsider again the question of how digital technologies and social networks are reshaping individual and collective behavior.
Lecturer(s):	Dr Anne Holohan

Learning Objectives:	Students successfully completing the module will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Apply different theoretical and methodological approaches to social networks; • Analyse the impact of information and communication technologies on political, economic and social institutions; • Engage with theories of the networked society and the ‘information age’; • Critically appraise the impact of new technologies on social norms and practices in diverse areas, including sexuality, death and crime.

Title:	SO4292 Migration (15 ECTS)
Module Content/Outline:	Part I of the module examines key forms of contemporary international movement, migrations, mobilities and transnationalism. We begin with an overview of the main migration phases globally before moving on to explore particular aspects of contemporary migration such as intra-European mobility, high skilled migration, irregular migration and lifestyle migration. Conceptual and empirical discussions will be linked to wider social transformations including the economic downturn, globalisation and securitization after 9/11. Part II of the module examines the social, cultural and economic integration of migrants and their children in Europe and the United States. After an introduction to the central theoretical perspectives in the assimilation discourse, we explore the attainment of migrants in the labour market, education and socio-culturally. We examine how these integration dimensions are influenced by host country institutions, origin country social structures and how they interact.
Lecturer(s):	Dr Elaine Moriarty and Dr David Ralph
Learning Objectives:	On successful completion of this module, students will be able to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Explain and critically discuss the main theories of migration and the social integration of migrants; • Discuss and evaluate the links between migration, globalisation, securitization and the economy; • Explain, critically analyse and compare the integration of migrants across a number of dimensions, host and origin countries; • Critically engage and examine current empirical research and policy documents in the field of migration.

Important regulations for Erasmus and Visiting Students

Erasmus and Visiting Students may not choose SO1310/1311 Introduction to Sociology and SO4200 Sociology/Social Policy Dissertation under any circumstance.

You should mainly pick second- and third-year (Senior Freshman and Junior Sophister) modules. However, in cases where your English and sociological background are adequate, you may also choose fourth-year (Senior Sophister) modules following discussion with the coordinator, Dr. Camilla Devitt (devittca@tcd.ie) and approval by the relevant lecturer.

10. BLACKBOARD

Blackboard is a virtual learning environment. All staff in the Department of Sociology use it to post module content, reading lists, PowerPoints and announcements and, in some cases, assignments.

To login to Blackboard (<http://mymodule.tcd.ie/>), please use your College Network username and password. If you cannot login, and receive a Kerberos error this indicates that your College network login password has expired.

To address this problem please follow the advice at IS Services or, if you continue to have problems, please email the IS Services Helpdesk at helpdesk@tcd.ie.

If you receive a message saying invalid username and/or password please check you are using the correct details. If this is the first time you have tried to log into Blackboard and you receive the invalid username and password message please email clt@tcd.ie for help.

Students are encouraged to check their relevant modules on Blackboard regularly.

11. ESSAY GUIDELINES

A sociology essay is essentially based on research, and as such is a scientific piece of work. All books and articles read and used by you in writing your essay must be cited both in the essay itself and in an alphabetical bibliography. The standardised procedures for doing this are as follows:

Ten useful tips for writing essays:

1. Keep your points relevant
2. Understand the question
3. Always write a plan to organise your ideas
4. Do not just state, argue
5. Write in paragraphs using topic sentences
6. Write a short introduction
7. Write a short conclusion
8. Write clear and concise English
9. Always proof-read your work (e.g. typos)
10. Learn from essay feedback provided by your lecturer

The following booklet is highly recommended for essay writing training purposes and it contains examples of 'good' (first-class) and 'bad' (fail grade) essays:

Redman, P. (2006) Good Essay Writing: a social sciences guide, London: Sage.

Citations in an essay

(a) One author, one publication

The surname of the author, a comma, and the year of publication, all enclosed in brackets.

For example:

Denmark has shown that Danish women can show equal labour force participation, given state supported care (Moss, 1988).

(b) One author, more than one publication

The surname of the author, a comma, the year of the first publication, a comma, and the year of the second publication, all enclosed in brackets.

For example:

...now women's domesticity is often seen as a result of gender segregation in waged work (Walby, 1986, 1990).

(c) More than one author, one publication to each

The surname of the first author, a comma, the year of the first author's publication, a semi-colon, the surname of the second author, a comma, and the year of the second author's publication, all enclosed in brackets.

For example:

In most non-industrial societies, however, women make a substantial contribution to subsistence, and in many they are the main food providers (Rogers, 1980; Moore, 1988).

(d) More than one author, more than one publication to each
The procedures of (b) and (c) are joined.

For example:

It can also be seen to be about men as a class taking control of women's reproductive activities as husbands/male partners/fathers; scientists/medical practitioners; businessmen; and governmental leaders (Hamner, 1981, 1983; Allen, 1986, 1988).

(e) Co-authorship

In sociology it often happens that publications are co-authored. In this case, the two surnames of the authors are joined by an 'and'.

For example:

More women are staying single and more are living with men without formalising their relationship in marriage (Kiernan and Wicks, 1990).

(f) Prolific authors

Some authors are prolific and may write several books or articles in the same year. If you are dealing with such an author, then add an 'a', 'b', 'c', etc., as required, to the year of publication. You must specify in your bibliography which letter corresponds to which publication of that year.

For example:

Others claim that the evidence for this is unclear and unconvincing (Segal, 1991b).

Quotations in an essay

(a) Non-indented quotations

The quotation is placed in single inverted commas, followed by the surname of the author, a comma, the year of publication, a colon, and the page number, all enclosed in brackets.

For example:

Such charges, however, should not be understood as a result of capitalism alone, or simply as social structures responding to the 'needs' of capital. 'These processes of transformation have been equally determined... by the existing forms of kinship and gender relations' (Moore, 1988: 116).

(b) Indented quotations

The quotation is indented (i.e. set apart from your essay, which should end on a colon, by a line, and brought in by about 1cm on both sides). Note: all quotations exceeding 40 words in your essay must be indented. Do not use quotation marks for indented texts.

For example:

Here racism and sexism converge in particularly damaging definitions of black womanhood: Afro-Caribbean women are stereotyped matriarchs, or seen as single mothers who expose their children to a stream of different men while Asian women are construed as passive victims... identified as failures because of their lack of English and refusal to integrate (Parmar, 1988: 199).

Preparing a bibliography

(a) Authored books

The surname of the author, a comma, the initial of the author's first name, the year of publication, a full stop, the title of the book italicised, a full stop, the place of publication, a colon, and the name of the publisher.

For example:

Habermas, J. 1971. Towards a Rational Society. London: Heinemann.

(b) Co-authored books

The authors' names are joined with an 'and'.

For example:

Morely, A. and Stanely, L. 1988. The Life and Death of Emily Wilding Davison. London: The Women's Press.

(c) Edited books

Between the initial of the author's first name and the year of publication, insert '(ed.)'.

For example:

Moi, T. (ed.) 1987. French Feminist Thought: A Reader. Oxford: Blackwell.

(d) Co-edited books

The authors' names are joined by an 'and', and '(eds)' is inserted.

For example:

Snitow, A. and Stansell, C. (eds) 1984. Desire: The Politics of Sexuality. London: Virago.

(e) Prolific authors

Add an 'a', 'b', 'c', etc., as required, to the year of publication.

For example:

Phillips, A. 1987a. Divided Loyalties: Dilemmas of Sex and Class. London: Virago.

Phillips, A. 1987b. Feminism and Equality. Oxford: Blackwell.

(f) Articles in journals

The surname of the author, a comma, the initial of the author's first name, the year of publication, a full stop, the title of the article in single inverted commas, a full stop, the title of the journal italicised, the volume of the journal, the number of the journal in brackets, a colon, and the page numbers of the article.

For example:

Hull, F. 1982. 'Organising for Innovation: beyond Burns and Stalker's organic type'. Sociology 16(4): 564-77

(g) Articles in edited books

The surname of the author, a comma, the initial of the author's first name, the year of publication, a full stop, the title of the article in single inverted commas, a full stop, the word

‘in’, the name of the author of the book with first initial followed by surname, and then as in (c) above.

For example:

Rendal, M. 1985. ‘The Winning of the Sex Discrimination Act’ in M. Arnot (ed.) Race and Gender. Oxford: Pergamon.

(h) Online resources and documents

Internet resources or newspaper articles usually also have an author. Put the surname of the author or government department, a comma, the initial of the author’s first name, the year of publication, a full stop, the title of the resource/article/document in single inverted commas, a full stop and proceed as shown in the examples. The most important point about referencing is that you are consistent throughout and choose one example and follow it strictly.

For example:

Townsend, M. 2003. ‘Languages to bear brunt of school crisis’. Available online at: <http://education.guardian.co.uk/schools/story/0,5500,1032774,00.html> (accessed 1 May 2009).

Low marks in essays are usually due to one or more of the following:

1. Failure to answer the question, introduction of information or arguments irrelevant to the questions raised by the title of the essay;
2. Lack of understanding of the subject and concepts under discussion; confused arguments;
3. Failure to plan, jumping from point to point and back again, repetition, ‘telling the story’ in simple descriptive style instead of picking out and analysing the key issues
4. Insufficient factual information, vagueness, or generalisations unsupported by evidence;
5. Plagiarism, i.e. copying from elsewhere (a book, article, the internet etc) without acknowledgement or copying from another student. Trinity College takes plagiarism very seriously and plagiarism incurs serious penalties as outlined below;
6. Too great a reliance on a single source, resulting in a narrowness of analysis or interpretation; uncritical or passive regurgitation of material gleaned from sources;
7. In general it is wise not to rely on internet sources (e.g. Wikipedia) as your main sources.
8. Poor communication. It is your job to communicate clearly to the reader what you want to say. If you leave the reader in doubt as to your meaning because of misuse of words, bad grammar, bad spelling or punctuation etc., then you have failed to communicate adequately.

You need to be able to address and answer the issues raised by the title or question of the essay. You also need to show evidence of wide and appropriate reading, the ability to assess and to critically evaluate the material encountered in the sources consulted. First-class work, as mentioned in the marking scheme, shows high originality not a mere synthesis of existing material or rehearsal of lecture notes. You need to be able to provide your own fresh perspective on a question, so please make full use of the library to locate material.

12. EXTENSION POLICY

Extensions of a few days, as in 'my printer collapsed last night / computer crashed' can be dealt with by the lecturer, who has discretion to give extensions for up to five working days. These can come directly as requests from the student, or sometimes via the College Tutor.

Extensions of more than a few days, particularly, but not only, where they involve illness of any kind, family circumstances, and bereavements must come from the student's College Tutor, and must all go to the Head of Department, not to individual lecturers. The Head of Department (Dr. Daniel Faas) communicates his decision to the College Tutor.

Students are required to append a medical certificate (where applicable) to their hard copy essay. Under no circumstances can coursework for any module be accepted after the start of the Trinity Term annual examinations.

13. PLAGIARISM

Copying work by published authors, from the internet or other students through unattributed direct quotation will be penalised by the Department and may also lead to University penalties. All direct quotation must be attributed to the author in question and referenced as explained above. Where you wish to quote from a secondary source, you must include both references in your text, i.e. both the source in which you found the quotation, and the source cited there, from which the quoted words had been taken. The University's full statement is set out in the Calendar, part 1, 'General Regulations and Information'.

Plagiarism can be avoided by following a few simple guidelines. The essential point to remember in this context is that we all, as students and academics, use and build on the work of others. There is nothing whatsoever to be ashamed of in doing this, but the key is that we do it in an open and explicit manner, and with due acknowledgement. When we use the work of others, therefore, either we quote their words directly and put these in quotation marks, or we paraphrase these. Either way, we provide an explicit citation of the work we are referring to, in the text, in a footnote, or both. To fail to do this is to risk being accused of plagiarism.

Students are reminded that where coursework is deemed to have been plagiarised by a lecturer within the Department of Sociology, the student will be summoned to attend a meeting with their Tutor, Lecturer as well as Head of Department and subsequently asked to resubmit. Resubmissions will only be awarded 41% (a minimal pass grade).

14. MARKING SCHEME AND SUBMISSION OF WORK

First class honors

I

70-100

First class honors in the School of Social Sciences and Philosophy is divided into grade bands which represent excellent, outstanding and extraordinary performances.

A first class answer demonstrates a comprehensive and accurate answer to the question, which exhibits a detailed knowledge of the relevant material as well as a broad base of knowledge. Theory and evidence will be well integrated and the selection of sources, ideas, methods or techniques will be well judged and appropriately organised to address the relevant issue or problem. It will demonstrate a high level of ability to evaluate and integrate information and ideas, to deal with knowledge in a critical way, and to reason and argue in a logical way.

EXCELLENT

First class answers (excellent) demonstrate a number of the following criteria:

- comprehensiveness and accuracy;
- clarity of argument and quality of expression;
- excellent structure and organization;
- integration of a range of relevant materials;
- evidence of wide reading;
- critical evaluation;
- lacks errors of any significant kind;
- shows some original connections of concepts and theories;
- contains reasoned argument and comes to a logical conclusion.

This answer does not demonstrate outstanding performance in terms of independence and originality.

OUTSTANDING

In addition to the above criteria, an outstanding answer will show frequent original treatment of material. Work at this level shows independence of judgement, exhibits sound critical thinking. It will frequently demonstrate characteristics such as imagination, originality and creativity.

This answer does not demonstrate exceptional performance in terms of insight and contribution to new knowledge.

85-100

EXTRAORDINARY

This answer is of a standard far in excess of what is expected of an undergraduate student. It will show frequent originality of thought, a sophisticated insight into the subject and make new connections between pieces of evidence beyond those presented in lectures. It demonstrates an ability to apply learning to new situations and to solve problems.

What differentiates a first class piece of work from one awarded an upper second is a greater lucidity, a greater independence of judgement, a greater depth of insight and degree of originality, more evidence of an ability to integrate material, and evidence of a greater breadth of reading and research.

----- o -----

Second Class, First Division

II.1

60-69

An upper second class answer generally shows a sound understanding of both the basic principles and relevant details, supported by examples, which are demonstrably well understood, and which are presented in a coherent and logical fashion. The answer should be well presented, display some analytical ability and contain no major errors of omissions. Not necessarily excellent in any area.

Upper second class answers cover a wider band of students. Such answers are clearly highly competent and typically possess the following qualities:

- accurate and well-informed;
- comprehensive;
- well-organised and structured;
- evidence of reading;
- a sound grasp of basic principles;
- understanding of the relevant details;
- succinct and cogent presentation; and
- evaluation of material although these evaluations may be derivative.

One essential aspect of an upper second class answer is that it must have completely dealt with the question asked by the examiner. In questions:

- i) all the major issues and most of the minor issues must have been identified;
- ii) the application of basic principles must be accurate and comprehensive; and
- iii) there should be a conclusion that weighs up the pros and cons of the arguments.

----- o -----

Second Class, Second Division

II.2

50-59

A substantially correct answer which shows an understanding of the basic principles.

Lower second class answers display an acceptable level of competence, as indicated by the following qualities:

- generally accurate;

- an adequate answer to the question based largely on textbooks and lecture notes;
- clearly presentation; and
- no real development of arguments.

----- O -----

Third Class Honors III 40-49

A basic understanding of the main issues if not necessarily coherently or correctly presented.

Third class answers demonstrate some knowledge of understanding of the general area but a third class answer tends to be weak in the following ways:

- descriptive only;
- does not answer the question directly;
- misses key points of information and interpretation
- contains serious inaccuracies;
- sparse coverage of material; and
- assertions not supported by argument or evidence.

----- O -----

Fail F1 30-39

Answers in the range usually contain some appropriate material (poorly organised) and some evidence that the student has attended lectures and done a bare minimum of reading. The characteristics of a fail grade include:

- misunderstanding of basic material;
- failure to answer the question set;
- totally inadequate information; and
- incoherent presentation.

----- O -----

Bad Fail F2 0-29

Answers in this range contain virtually no appropriate material and an inadequate understanding of basic concepts.

----- O -----

Submission of work

All coursework must be submitted on www.turnitin.com no later than 16:00 on the day of the deadline set by the lecturer. Failure to do this will automatically result in a 10% penalty. JF students only must submit their coursework in class at the end of the lecture, as advised by the lecturer. Failure to comply with these regulations will also result in a 10% penalty. The Department of Sociology takes no responsibility for coursework not submitted properly. After marking, JS and SS coursework is kept by the department for possible inspection by our external examiner. You must therefore keep your own copy prior to submission.

Please note the following five rules regarding submission of written work:

1. Essays should be within the word limits set by individual lecturers: aim to produce a concise argument, not a great quantity of flowery prose.
2. Written work should be typed, with double or one-and-a-half line spacing to make it easier for markers to read.
3. Leave a margin of 3cm on all sides of your work to allow markers to write comments and to optimise the presentation of your work.
4. List your sources at the end of your work in an alphabetical bibliography as specified in the essay guidelines section above. Acknowledge all quotations or other references to other people's work, in the same way as a scholarly book or article does, to show when you have borrowed other people's ideas or words.
5. All work must be submitted via www.turnitin.com, which among things acts as a plagiarism detector. Details of how to submit will be supplied for individual modules. An essay must be your own work, even though based on that of other writers. Please refer to the section on plagiarism in this handbook for more information.

Assessment of coursework

Assessment involves presentation, research and structure. In JF year, a specified proportion of the essay grade is given for each of these elements. In subsequent years the essay is graded as a whole, but you should bear in mind that markers still evaluate the essay in these terms.

In JF year, 20% of the essay mark is awarded to correct presentation. This includes citation, grammar, spelling, and clarity of expression. You must use a word processor when doing your essays – no handwritten essays will be accepted. Essays must have page numbers. 40% of the essay mark is awarded to research, i.e. evidence of reading. Another 40% of the essay mark is awarded to organisational structure, i.e. synthesis and organisation of ideas.

15. PASSING COURSEWORK AND ANNUAL EXAMINATIONS

Students must resubmit failed coursework within two weeks of being informed of their grade by the lecturer. Students who have failed to submit coursework for Michaelmas Term must arrange to see the Head of Department, Dr. Daniel Faas (daniel.faas@tcd.ie).

Students must undertake their examinations in line with individual course examination and compensation regulations.

Requests for re-check of grades

All students have the right to discuss their examination and assessment performance with appropriate members of staff, as arranged by the Head of Department.

However, re-checks and re-marking of any piece of work can only take place on three grounds: an observed error in the calculation of the exam mark, exam questions not being covered in the module or the examiner showing bias. In no other case will essays or exam papers be relooked at. The request must be made through their Tutor to the Head of Department or Director of Teaching and learning (Undergraduate) and must refer to one of these three grounds. Re-checking may result in lowering or raising the grade.

Students should be aware that in any event, no assessment or examination mark should be considered final until all marks have been reviewed by the external examiner at the end of the summer examinations. The current external examiner for Sociology is Dr. Anne Byrne of NUI Galway.

16. SUPPLEMENTAL EXAMINATIONS

Any paper(s)/subject not taken at the annual examination for excused reasons must be taken at the supplemental session in September. Students who are absent from the supplementals without permission from the Senior Lecturer will have failed and will be excluded.

In the Senior Sophister year, when you take your final degree examinations, there are no supplemental exams in any of our degree programmes. Students who obtain an F grade as a result of a supplemental examination will be permitted to repeat the year.

BESS and PPES-specific regulations

Although means are often very important, grade count is the initial mechanism for determining grades, for example, 68 68 58 58 58 58 is a II.2 but 70 70 70 70 60 60 is a I.

In the annual examination, students who obtain an F1 in one paper need a mark of over 50 in another to compensate and avoid supplementals. Those who obtain an F1 in two or more papers or an F2 in one paper are deemed to have failed. In the supplemental examination, the compensation rule is more demanding in that students who obtain an F1 in one paper need at least two marks of over 50 in other papers to compensate and pass the year.

Students in the Freshman years must repeat only those subjects in which they failed, provided there are not more than two grades of F2, in which case all papers must be repeated.

Students in the Junior Sophister year who obtain four II.2 grades or better and two F1 grades are required only to resit the two failed papers. Students failing two papers, with one or both at the F2 level, are required to resit all papers. Students who fail three or more papers in the annual examination are required to resit all papers. Students must obtain an overall II.2 grade to be allowed to proceed to the Senior Sophister year.

Further information is available in the BESS/PPES exam booklet by clicking here.

TSM-specific regulations

In Junior and Senior Freshman years, students who obtain an F grade in one subject at the annual examination are required to do a supplemental examination in that subject only. Students who obtain an F grade in both subjects at the annual examination are required to do a supplemental examination in both subjects.

In Junior Sophister year, there are no supplementals for students following Pattern B. Those following Pattern A with an F grade in one subject at the annual examination sit for a supplementals in that subject only. Pattern A students who obtain an F grade in both subjects at the annual examination are required to sit for a supplemental exam in both subjects.

Students who have an overall pass in their subject and who may have an F mark (either F1 or F2) for an individual paper do not have to repeat that paper. Those who do not have an overall pass and who are required to supplement in one or both subjects should assume that they are retaking all examination papers.

Students who fail the annual examination solely because of a failure in assessed work done during the year may be required to resubmit that work without taking supplementals.

17. SCHOLARSHIP EXAMINATIONS

Election

Foundation scholars are elected annually in various subjects on the result of an examination held in January of each year. The names of those elected are announced in public by the Provost from the steps of the Examination Hall on the Monday in Trinity Week.

Entitlements

Foundation scholars (there are not more than 70 at any one time) and non-foundation scholars (these were added when the university expanded last century) are entitled to free Commons (meals in the Dining Hall), and free rooms in College. They also receive a salary (allowance), and do not have to pay fees. The entitlements of scholars can continue for some years after graduation, if they are engaged in further academic research or study.

Eligibility

Any undergraduate student, from any year, may sit scholarship. Given the need to have some background in the subject of the scholarship examinations, and the desirability of having a few years before graduation to profit from election, the traditional time to sit scholarship is in the Senior Freshman year. There is no quota on the number of scholars that may be elected in any one subject or department.

Examination

Candidates are examined in the modules of their course up to the end of Michaelmas Term of the Senior Freshman year.

Sociology I will contain six questions, based on material covered in SO1310/11 Introduction to Sociology in the last academic year. Candidates are expected to answer two questions. Sociology II will contain nine questions, based on material covered in the first term on each of SO2310 (Introduction to Social Research), SO2343 (Gender, Work and Family) and SO2330 (European Societies). Candidates are expected to answer any two questions.

Sociology I and II papers carry equal marks. The scope of the other papers is described in the relevant handbooks.

(a) BESS including Business Studies and Language candidates

The examination consists of four 2¼ hour papers chosen from the following:

Business I and II
Economics I and II
Political Science I and II
Sociology I and II
Quantitative Methods

Business studies and Language candidates will be asked to take the following papers:

Business I and II
Language 1 (Language Fluency inc. Oral)
Language 2 (Business Environment)

All papers carry equal marks. Recommendations for scholarship will be based on all four chosen papers, subject to all four papers being passed.

(b) PPES candidates

Candidates are examined in at least three of the constituent disciplines of the degree programme. The examination consists of four 2¼ hour papers chosen from the following:

Philosophy I and II
Political Science I and II
Economics I and II
Sociology I and II
Quantitative Methods

Candidates should take at least one paper in each of the three disciplines they pursue in the Senior Freshman year. For those taking sociology, Sociology I is mandatory and for those taking philosophy, Philosophy I is mandatory.

All papers carry equal marks. Recommendations for scholarship will be based on all four chosen papers, subject to all four papers being passed.

(c) SocSocPol candidates

Candidates are examined in the modules of their course up to the end of Michaelmas Term of the Senior Freshman year. The examination consists of four 2¼ hour papers as follows:

Sociology I and II
Social policy I and II

All papers carry equal marks. Recommendations for scholarship will be based on all four papers, subject to all four papers being passed.

(d) TSM candidates

Candidates are examined in the modules of their course up to the end of Michaelmas Term of the Senior Freshman year. The examination in Sociology consists of two 2¼-hour papers as follows:

Sociology I and II

Both papers carry equal marks. Please refer to your other department for further information on papers in that half of your course. The scope of each paper is described in the relevant course handbooks.

(e) European Studies candidates

Candidates are examined in four areas. The two language papers are each of 1.5 hours duration and each carry one sixth of the overall marks. The language papers may include an oral component. The remaining two papers are each of 3 hour duration and each carry one third of the overall marks. Candidates will take the following papers:

Two of: French language, German language, Italian language, Polish language, Russian language, Spanish language, Culture and politics in eighteenth-century Europe.

One paper from the following subject areas (optional subjects): History, Political Science, Sociology, Economics

Application details

You are required to register your choice of examination papers before the Scholarship examination by the end of Week 5 of Michaelmas Term. There are specific registration requirements for those students sitting Philosophy and Sociology papers. Further details are available via this link: <http://www.tcd.ie/vp-cao/teo/vpteolinks.php>.

18. CONDUCT OF EXAMINATIONS, TESTS AND OTHER CREDITED WORK

Departmental staff adhere to the following procedures in relation to examinations, term tests and other methods of assessing BESS, PPES, TSM and SocSocPol students:

- (a) Where a test/essay/project counts towards the final mark, this fact is made known to students before the end of the second week of the teaching module in question. The extent to which it is taken into account, the arrangements should students have legitimate reasons to be excused from doing the relevant work at the appropriate time, and the penalties that attach to non timely submission of such work will all be made clear to the students as early as possible, and not later than the end of the second week of the teaching module in question. See also Section 9 in this handbook.
- (b) Tests/essays/projects are handed back to students as quickly as the marking process will allow, and the gap between submission and return of work should never exceed six weeks.
- (c) Examination papers will be a fair and reasonable reflection of the material covered during the year. Guidelines concerning the broad format of the paper, and the type of question to be set, will be provided to students as early as possible and certainly not later than the final week of Hilary (Teaching) Term. Past annual examination and Foundation Scholarship examination papers can be accessed through the following link: http://www.tcd.ie/Local/Exam_Papers/index.html.
- (d) Examiners or competent deputies will be present during the first fifteen minutes of an examination so that difficulties arising from examination papers may be resolved expeditiously. If examiners are unable to be present at the examination, they will be readily contactable by telephone.
- (e) In TSM Junior Sophister year, Pattern A students are assessed through coursework and end-of-year examinations with total marks awarded being 500. Pattern B students who take Sociology as their minor subject are awarded total marks of 350 (35% of their final degree result with the remaining 65% from their other subject); Pattern B students continuing with sociology as their major subject are awarded marks of 150 (15% of their final degree result with the remaining % being awarded in SS year). In both cases students are assessed through a combination of coursework and exam.
- (f) In TSM Senior Sophister year, Pattern A students are assessed through a combination of coursework and end-of-year examinations in each of the modules taken with total marks awarded being 500. Pattern B students must write a dissertation and, together with the other modules taken, are awarded total marks of 650. 50% of their final degree result comes from marks obtained in Senior Sophister year, 15% from marks carried forward from Junior Sophister year (65% in total from Sociology) with the remaining 35% from their other subject in which they were minoring.

19. AVAILABILITY OF EXAM RESULTS

Any student who fails to receive his/her result and whose result is not on online should contact his/her tutor immediately. In no circumstance will results be given over the telephone or in email correspondence.

Students have a right to discuss examination scripts privately with examiners. A student who wishes to do so should consult the appropriate examiners within a reasonable time after the results have been announced. Students wishing to have a paper rechecked or wishing to initiate an appeal against a result should consult their College Tutor after they have seen the examiner(s). Such action must be taken immediately after the results are published.

Examination scripts are held by examiners, or departmental offices, for a period of 13 months. This period of 13 months begins on the day of the publication of the relevant examination results. Scripts cannot be released to students, but students may read their own scripts in the presence of the relevant examiner.

Dates for the publication of results and appeals will be notified via the respective notice board or webpage for your degree programme.

20. DISSERTATION GUIDELINES

The dissertation including the final research proposal is worth 15 ECTS. It is intended to be a piece of empirical research; it cannot be based only on library research. To this end you may use social surveys, interviews or focus groups, participant observation, content or discourse analysis of textual data, archival research, or secondary analysis of existing statistical data (such as the European Social Survey) to generate your research findings.

The length of an undergraduate dissertation must not exceed 12,000 words and the final manuscript should include a word count. Students should discuss the overall length and length of individual chapters with their supervisor.

Students should identify and approach suitable supervisors over the summer. The research interests of individual staff members can be found at: www.tcd.ie/sociology/staff/ (Sociology) and <http://www.socialwork-socialpolicy.tcd.ie/staff/> (Social Work and Social Policy). Those who have not found a suitable supervisor will be allocated one during MT1.

The research proposal (approximately 2,000 words) is a clear statement of what you will do, and should consist of:

1. A literature-based introduction including your aims and research question(s);
2. An initial outline of your theoretical and/or conceptual framework;
3. A clear description of your research methodology;
4. A preliminary list of references (bibliography).

The research proposal must be submitted in the Dissertation Seminar class during MT5 (Wednesday 22 October 2014). Before you start data collection, your research proposal must be discussed and accepted by your supervisor.

Exchange students returning from abroad must equally identify and approach a supervisor over the summer. They are strongly advised to take a research methods module during their time abroad in preparation for their dissertation project.

There should be regular supervision meetings throughout the dissertation process. Students are asked to meet with their supervisor at least four times in total and at least twice per term. Individual supervisors can arrange further meetings as they see fit. Students are strongly encouraged to submit one or more draft chapters to their supervisor for feedback.

The structure of the dissertation varies from project to project and there are multiple approaches among supervisors in the Department. Students should always consult with their own supervisor about the recommended structure of your project. Below is a suggested template of how a Sociology undergraduate dissertation could be structured:

1. Abstract of no more than half a page summarising the aims, theoretical approaches, methodology and main findings of your dissertation;
2. Table of contents page;
3. List of tables and figures, if applicable;

4. Introduction, which states your research aims, critically reviews existing literature to inform the formulation of your research problem or question(s);
5. Theoretical and/or conceptual chapter which includes a discussion of how a theory/theoretical or conceptual aspects informed your study;
6. Research methodology chapter with subsections that discuss and reflect on strategy/design, access and sampling, data collection instruments, data analysis technique(s), ethical issues (including your own positioning);
7. Findings chapter which discusses your data and relates your findings to the theoretical aspects and literature identified earlier;
8. Conclusion, which evaluates the main findings, discusses implications for research, theory (and policy if applicable) and outlines avenues for future research;
9. Bibliography, in line with the departmental guidelines in this handbook;
10. Appendices, include questionnaires, interview guide, coding frames and access letters where applicable.

Students need to familiarise themselves with the ethical guidelines which can be found at <http://www.social-phil.tcd.ie/Ethics.php>. They must discuss the Research Ethics Checklist and co-sign it with your supervisor. The signed document must be returned to the dissertation seminar coordinator. Normally, inexperienced first-time researchers should not be conducting research with vulnerable people.

Students must submit two soft bound copies of their dissertation to the department office by Thursday 2 April 2015. This deadline is strictly enforced and students are expected to anticipate potential problems such as computer crashes - please finish with time to spare!

The dissertation will be marked independently by two staff members, one being the supervisor, and a mark will be agreed. A sample of the dissertations is then read by the external examiner whose decision is final in relation to the dissertations she has read.

21. SOCIOLOGY PRIZES

John Jackson Memorial Prize

This prize was founded in 2012 with support from the Trinity Alumni Appeal in honour of the late Professor John Jackson, who was the first Chair of the Department of Sociology (1974-1997). It is awarded annually to the Senior Sophister TSM Pattern B Sociology Major student who achieves the highest grade. Value, €200.

Sociology Dissertation Prize

This prize was founded in 2012 with support from the Trinity Alumni Appeal. It is awarded annually to the student who receives the highest Dissertation grade in their Senior Sophister year. Value, €200.

Sociology Trinity Alumni Prize

The prize was founded in 2012 with support from the Trinity Alumni Appeal. It is awarded annually to the Junior Sophister TSM Pattern B Sociology Minor student who receives the highest grade. Value, €200.

Anthony Coughlan Prize

This prize was founded in 1999 by a gift from Anthony Coughlan. It is awarded annually, on the recommendation of the court of examiners, to the Senior Sophister student who obtains the highest academic grade or marks in the moderatorship examination in Sociology and Social Policy provided sufficient merit is shown. Value, €127.

Trinity Trust Prize

This prize was contributed by Trinity Trust in 1980. The prize is awarded to the moderatorship student with the best overall marks in single honours sociology, single honours political science, or joint honors political science and sociology. Value, €77.

22. NEW STUDENT INFORMATION SYSTEM (SITS)

The way that you do things in College is changing – including how you have just registered for the year. The College has recognised that some of the administrative processes in College were becoming somewhat outdated (such as queuing in the rain to register or trying to get a letter to prove that you are a student) and has invested in a brand new student information system which is accessible to all staff and students via the web portal my.tcd.ie

This means that, from 2012/2013 onwards, all communications from College will be sent to you via your online portal which will give you access to an ‘in tray’ of your messages. You will also be able to view your timetables online, both for your teaching and for your examinations. All fee invoices/payments, student levies and commencement fees will be issued online and all payments will be carried out online. You will be able to view your personal details in the new system – some sections of which you will be able to edit yourself. Up until now, all examination results were published online by the Examinations Office at <http://www.tcd.ie/vpcao/examinations.php> – in future, it is planned that your results will also be communicated to you via the online portal. Future plans for the new system include online module registration and ongoing provision of module assessment results.

As this is a brand new way of doing things in Trinity, full user helpline facilities, including emergency contact details, will be available from when you register to guide you through these new processes and to answer any queries that you may have.

23. COLLEGE TUTORS

Trinity College is the only university in Ireland to operate a so-called tutorial system. All undergraduate students are assigned a tutor when they are admitted to College. Your tutor, who is a member of the teaching staff, will represent you before the College authorities, and will give confidential advice on modules, discipline, examinations, fees and other matters. The tutor is not a supervisor of studies. Students may change their tutor with the approval of the Senior Tutor, located on the ground floor in House 27.

The current Senior Tutor is Dr. Claire Laudet (senior.tutor@tcd.ie). For further information about the tutorial system, please click here.

Sociology staff members serving as College Tutors in 2014-15 are: Dr. Daniel Faas (daniel.faas@tcd.ie), Dr. David Landy (dlandy@tcd.ie), Dr Peter Mühlau (muhlaup@tcd.ie), Dr. Elaine Moriarty (emoriar@tcd.ie) and Dr. Anne Holohan (aholohan@tcd.ie). Please contact your relevant tutor and include your name, student ID and problem encountered.

24. TRANSCRIPTS

BESS, PPES and SocSocPol students should request their transcripts through the Course Office by clicking here. Transcripts take around seven days to process.

TSM students should request their transcripts for the subject of Sociology by e-mailing Fiona McIntyre (sociology@tcd.ie) and include the following information: your name, your student number, your course of study, and a list of all the taught modules taken each academic year. Please submit your request at least two weeks before you require the transcript.

25. ERASMUS AND INTERNATIONAL EXCHANGES

The Erasmus programme is named after Desiderius Erasmus of Rotterdam (1465-1536) who lived and worked in several parts of Europe in quest of the knowledge and insights that contacts with other countries could bring. By donating his fortune, he became a pioneer of mobility grants. Research shows that a period spent abroad not only enriches student lives in the academic field but also in the acquisition of intercultural skills and self-reliance.

The Department would like as many of you as possible to take part in student exchanges. You usually go abroad during your third (JS) year. We currently have 10 Erasmus partners:

1. Sorbonne University Paris - Department of Sociology, International Office
2. Charles University Prague – Department of Sociology, International Office
3. University of Copenhagen – Department of Sociology, International Office
4. University of Helsinki – Department of Sociology, International Office
5. Istanbul Bogazici University - Department of Sociology, International Office
6. University of Munich - Department of Sociology, International Office
7. Umeå University – Department of Sociology, International Office
8. University of Malta – Department of Sociology, International Office
9. University Lille 1 – Department of Sociology and Anthropology, International Centre
10. Utrecht University – Department of Sociology, International Office

Note that most of our Erasmus partners offer a large number of modules in English. These exchanges are open to all of you in Sociology regardless of your degree programme. Funding is available for all Erasmus students. This covers travel and some additional costs. The average grant for a full academic year abroad will be around €1,500 depending on destination. All Irish grants and scholarships continue to be paid whilst you are away.

If you decide to spend only half a year abroad, you will be examined on the basis of work completed during the other half at Trinity plus any examinations in the modules you take at the host university. If you decide to spend a full academic year abroad, you will take modules equivalent to those at Trinity via the European Credit Transfer System (ECTS) and your marks obtained abroad will be converted back into a Trinity grade (please see p.15).

International exchanges

Applications for non-EU college-wide exchanges must be made through International Relations and Study Abroad at TCD and not to the individual university in question. Unlike with Erasmus, the minimum academic requirement is an Upper Second (II.1). You will be competing against fellow Trinity students from other departments for these exchanges.

Please note that these are non-fee-paying exchanges and therefore a great opportunity for you to study for half a year or a full year at some of the best universities outside Europe. Most of our partners are in the Top 50 according to the latest Times Higher Education Supplement Global University Ranking. You need to be aware however that there are costs involved for overseas flights as well as accommodation and maintenance.

The Department of Sociology currently has 20 non-EU international exchange partners, as part of a TCD wide selection process based on JF grades and a motivational essay.

1. Australian National University – Department of Sociology, International Office
2. University of Melbourne – Department of Sociology, International Office
3. McGill University – Department of Sociology, International Office
4. University of Toronto – Department of Sociology, Centre for International Experience
5. National University Singapore – Department of Sociology, International Students Section
6. New York University – Department of Sociology, International Office
7. Boston College – Department of Sociology, International Office
8. University of Pennsylvania – Department of Sociology, International Student Services
9. Georgetown University – Department of Sociology, International Student Services
10. University of Massachusetts – Department of Sociology, International Programs Office
11. University of California – details available from Trinity's International Office
12. University of Chicago – Department of Sociology, Office of International Affairs
13. UNC Chapel Hill – Department of Sociology, International Student Services
14. University of Notre Dame – Department of Sociology, International Student Affairs
15. Barnard College New York – Department of Sociology, International Office
16. Tokyo University – Department of Sociology, Division of International Affairs
17. Beihang University – School of Social Sciences, International Office
18. Peking University – Department of Sociology, Office of International Relations
19. Tsinghua University – Department of Sociology, International Students Office
20. St Xavier's College Kolkata – Department of Sociology, International Admissions

Please discuss the possibility of an Erasmus or International Exchange with your parents during Michaelmas Term, making sure you understand the financial implications and commitments involved in going abroad. Note that the Department of Sociology operates a very strict cancellation policy. Once you are selected and sign the mobility grant form (Erasmus exchanges), you can only withdraw from an exchange in the most exceptional cases with a medical certificate or tutor note submitted to the Sociology Office.

If you have any questions about our Erasmus, International Exchange and Visiting Student programme please feel free to contact the Erasmus and Visiting Student Coordinators:

Dr Camilla Devitt (devittca@tcd.ie) if you are an Outbound Trinity Student

Dr David Ralph (ralphd@tcd.ie) if you are an Inbound Erasmus or Visiting Student

Further information is available at:

http://www.tcd.ie/sociology/undergrad/student_exchanges.php.

26. SOCIAL AND POLITICAL REVIEW

The Trinity Social and Political Review (SPR) is an undergraduate research journal, written and published by students of Trinity College Dublin. The SPR provides a forum for the exploration of a wide variety of social and political issues, and each year compiles the best in original undergraduate research and writing. The journal showcases the academic excellence of students not only in political science and sociology, but in disciplines as diverse as law, economics, philosophy, history, psychology, literary studies, and linguistics.

Published pieces range from formal academic essays to articles and reviews reflecting on current events, all with the specific purpose of promoting deeper and more meaningful engagement among young people with pressing social and political challenges of our time.

Each year in Michaelmas Term, the editorial team issues a call for articles. Each Sociology undergraduate student is actively encouraged to submit one of his/her essays or opinion pieces for consideration for publication in the next volume.

The Sociology Director of SPR is Dr. Elaine Moriarty, emoriar@tcd.ie. Further information and past issues of the Journal are available at: <http://www.spr.tcdlife.ie/index.html>

27. THE LIBRARY

Trinity College Library is spread over a number of different buildings on campus - the names 'Berkeley Library', 'Hamilton Library' and so forth refer to these different locations. As Sociology students, what you will be using for the most part is the Lecky Library.

The main Sociology section is on upper level of the Lecky Library and a floor map is available by clicking here. Books are arranged according to the Dewey Decimal system, in which Sociology books are numbered from 300 upwards. There are multiple copies of some of the more important books on the modules (although it is recommended that you buy the core texts). Some books on interdisciplinary subjects (i.e. where two or more subjects overlap) are to be found in other parts of the library. Books for Social Studies students are located on the lower level of the Lecky Library and a floor map is available here.

How to borrow books

You need a valid TCD ID card to borrow books. Books are issued and returned at the Service Counters in the Library reading rooms. Fines for overdue books are 50c per day; fines for overdue Short Loan Collection books are 25c per hour. As an undergraduate, you may borrow up to four items in total at any one time from Berkeley, Lecky and Ussher (BLU) Libraries. Books labelled LEN (with Yellow Sticker) are for one-week loan only; books labelled LEN (no Yellow Sticker) are for up to four-week loan; and those labelled MUS LEN are for one-week loan only. You may additionally borrow four P-MUS LEN labelled books for up to four weeks from the Hamilton or John Stearne Medical library.

Open Shelf Reference Material includes the prefixes REF, BIB, PER and THESIS (Journals, Reference Works, Bibliographies, Early Printed Books, Manuscripts, Theses) and cannot be removed from the Library.

The Open Shelf Short Loan Collection is located by the counters in the Iveagh Hall (Berkeley Library), Hamilton Library and John Stearne Medical Library (JSML). The material includes multiple copies of books in heavy demand, some lecture notes as well as other materials deposited by lecturers. The material cannot be removed from the Library but there is a five-hour loan period after which books must be returned to the counter.

As an undergraduate, you cannot borrow from the Open Access Collection but can use these books in the Library for study or research. If an Open Access copy is on loan and there are no lending copies available you can ask for the item to be recalled; to recall e-mail libraryrecalls@tcd.ie with relevant details. More information is at www.tcd.ie/Library.

80% of the Library's print collection is stored in Stacks and in the Santry Book Repository. Material can be requested online or by completing a call slip. Requests from Stacks are usually delivered on the same day; requests from Santry are usually delivered the next day. You have a maximum five requests in one day. Material is held in the Library for three days to be collected and undergraduates must read this material in the Library.

The library catalogues

If you know your way around, you can sometimes find books you need by just browsing on the shelves, but often you will need to use the library catalogues. Most of the books you need can be found on the online library catalogue. There are computer terminals throughout the different parts of the library on which you can access this catalogue. Books can be looked up under author, title, title-keyword or subject keyword. The online catalogue can also be accessed on the web at www.tcd.ie/Library. You can also renew books online.

For further information, see the library guides, which can be found at the library counters. The staff at the counters in the various libraries should be able to help with most enquiries, but for enquiries specifically concerning Sociology material in the library, you may need to consult the Subject Librarian, Ruth Potterton on the Upper Floor of the Lecky Library and her email is rpttrton@tcd.ie.

If you are new to Trinity College, please make sure you attend one of the training sessions during the first weeks of term to familiarise yourself with all the features of the Library.

28. COMPUTERS

Students must submit all essays, dissertations and so forth in typewritten form. As typing on a word-processor is far easier than using a conventional typewriter, it is in your interest to familiarise yourself with the computers in college and their use. The College has both Pentium PCs and Macintoshes.

Computers which are available for undergraduate students to use can be found at the following locations:

- Beckett Rooms 1 and 2 – Lower ground floor, Arts Building.
- Áras an Phiarsaigh – at the Pearse Street side of the campus beside Players' Theatre. Access from inside campus, not from Pearse Street.
- 201 Pearse Street (PC's only) – to the right of Áras an Phiarsaigh. Access from inside campus. 'The Arches' – under the railway line in the northeast corner of campus.
- Hamilton Building – at the Westland Row end of campus; access from inside campus.
- 3 College Green – Second floor next to the Sociology classrooms and noticeboard

All the above locations also have printers. Printing is free, but students must provide their own paper and floppy discs. These are on sale at the Students' Union Shops and at the Computer Shop in Áras an Phiarsaigh.

Getting started

When you register, you will be given a login ID and a password, both of which you will need to access the College's computers. You will also be given a college e-mail account. Brief starter courses in computer use will also be offered during the week of registration.

Every student will also be provided with personal filestorage. This means that you can save material on the college network, so you can access this material on any computer in any of the above locations, and not have to rely entirely on CD ROM, DVD or USB sticks. The Department strongly encourages you to back up your data daily in case of computer crashes, loss or damage of your memory devices. It is also recommended you save your data on multiple memory devices. Anything you save on your personal filestorage will be safe from prying eyes, as it can only be opened using your own password.

Any problems you have with computers should be brought to Information Systems Services (IS Services). Their helpdesk is in Áras an Phiarsaigh, and they can be reached on the telephone at extension 2000, or email helpdesk@tcd.ie. For further information, see the IS Services Handbook, which is available from the helpdesk.

29. STUDENT HEALTH SERVICE

The College Health Centre (Telephone 01 896 1556 or 01 896 1591) is located in House 47, Trinity College Dublin, on the main campus. It is open normal office hours during term and non-term time. The hours of attendance for students are as follows:

10.30 am - 1.00 pm

2.00 pm - 4.40 pm

Emergency appointments available at 9:30am and 2pm; if demand is heavy, lists may be closed early. Consultations are normally by prior appointment only.

It is not possible at present to book online. Students are encouraged to make appointments as early as possible as the above times are quite restricted. Those who make appointments and decide not to avail of the consultation should notify the Health Service in advance. Failure to do so can deprive other students of time with the doctor.

General Practitioner Clinics include:

- General Medicine
- Mental Health: working in close association with the (confidential) College Counselling Service (see next page) and Student Health Service Psychiatrist
- Sports Medicine
- Antenatal Care: Shared Ante-Natal care normally arranged with either the National Maternity Hospital, Holles Street, or the Rotunda Hospital, Parnell St. Mothers are seen by the doctor for routine ante-natal care, but normally attend the hospital on three to four occasions throughout the pregnancy and for delivery.

Nurse-run clinics include:

- Triage of emergencies
- Contraceptive advice
- Smears
- Chlamydia
- Eye testing for driving
- Phlebotomy (blood tests)
- Audiometry
- Routine vaccinations
- Routine injections
- Emergency contraception.

For more information, see <https://www.tcd.ie/collegehealth/>

30. STUDENT COUNSELLING SERVICE

The Student Counselling Service is located on the 3rd floor at 7-9 South Leinster Street.

It has introduced a new Stepped Care Model for 2014-15. From 15 September onwards all students who request a counselling appointment will be offered in the first instance, a brief consultation appointment. A larger number of these pre-booked appointments will be available at varied times throughout the week with different counsellors. We will also continue offering lunchtime drop in brief consultations.

New and returning students from previous years will all be assessed through an initial brief consultation to ascertain their needs.

In many cases this single opportunity to talk through issues provides enough support. In other instances it helps the counsellors identify what further supports are available to best meet their needs going forward.

This might include referral to supportive therapeutic groups, information on self-help supports within the service, online therapy programmes or a scheduled appointment to engage in further counselling or in some cases referral to external services.

At peak times students may be allocated to a wait list for counselling if there are no available appointments within 2 weeks. Administrative staff will make contact with the student by phone or email to inform them of available appointments while on the wait list.

There is an emergency counselling appointment available each day at 3pm. To book this appointment, please call 01 896 1407. A duty counsellor will continue to be available to answer queries or for phone consultation if concerns arise about any student.

How to book a consult appointment:

Students can book the initial brief (30 minute) consultation with a Counselling Service staff member in two ways:

1. Students can book a brief consultation appointment by calling into the service in person (7-9 South Leinster Street (3rd Floor) or phone us on 01 896 1407.

Alternatively

2. Students can come into the service for the daily lunchtime drop in Brief consultation slot (2 available daily) between 1 and 2pm. As these are popular it is advisable to come early to avail of this.

31. STUDENT PEER MENTORING

From the moment you arrive in College right the way through to your end of year exams Student 2 Student (S2S) is here to make sure your first year is fun, engaging and a great foundation for the rest of your time in Trinity. You will meet your two S2S mentors in Fresher's Week and they will make sure you know other people in your course before your classes even start. They will keep in regular touch with you throughout your first year and invite you to events on and off campus. They will also give you useful information about your course and what to look out for. Mentors are students who have been through first year and know exactly what it feels like, so you never have to worry about asking them a question or talking to them about anything that is worrying you.

S2S also offers trained Peer Supporters if you want to talk confidentially to another student or just to meet a friendly face for a coffee and a chat.

S2S is supported by the Senior Tutor's Office and the Student Counselling Service.

33. FURTHER INFORMATION

The Department's undergraduate noticeboards are situated one floor below the departmental office. Entering the department's building at 3 College Green you can reach them by taking the first lift as far as floor 2, then walk and look straight ahead between seminar room 4 and the PC lab. On these noticeboards you will find up-to-date module-specific information.

Please make sure you have read this handbook and consulted the Calendar given to you first before approaching or emailing the office. Make sure you know whom to approach with your query, as listed at the beginning of this handbook to avoid unnecessary emails and speed up the response system. We are here to help you make the most of your stay within Sociology!
