Introduction

Lifelong learning is a continual process for every one of us, whether it is for personal interest or professional development. Trinity College Dublin, the University of Dublin offers a wide range of evening and short courses in many different fields which result in the gaining of new ideas, new knowledge, and in some instances, new qualifications.

Today, the continuing nature of education is more important than ever. Old skills become obsolete, new skills come to be in high demand. The people who can participate most effectively in our fast-moving modern society are those who are most open to new ideas, most adaptable and willing to continually re-educate themselves and broaden their perspectives.

In addition to degree and diploma courses, there is a wide range of short courses to choose from in Trinity, from history of art to social work, philosophy to psychology, Greek and Roman mythology and religion to physics and a wide variety of languages among others. We hope that you will find a course that appeals to you in this booklet.

Autism Diagnostic Observation Schedule (ADOS-2) for the Clinical Setting

ADOS-2 is a semi-structured, standardised assessment of communication, social interaction, play/imaginative use of materials and restricted and repetitive behaviours for individuals who have been referred because of possible autism spectrum disorder (ASD). Fundamentally new to the ADOS-2 than ADOS-G are the procedures involved in the algorithm computation and the comparison score for module 1 through 3 which were revised on the basis of the findings of recent validation research. The new comparison score provides a way of indicating a participant’s level of autism spectrum related symptomatology and it can also be used to interpret an individual’s own change in autism spectrum related symptoms over time. ADOS-2 also includes a toddler module, which is designed for very young children who do not use phrase speech but who are between the ages of twelve and thirty months. The toddler module has its own algorithms that provide ‘ranges of concern’ instead of cut-off scores. A variety of specialists will use the ADOS-2, their use of results in writing reports and making recommendations to inform medical diagnoses, special education classification and occupational therapists and speech and hearing professionals might use for treatment planning.

An Introduction to Woodcarving

Well known Sculptor Conleth Gent (www.conlethgent.ie) will be running a woodcarving course two and a half hours per day one day a week over a five week period based in the Trinity College Botanic Gardens at Dartry, Dublin 6 (nearest Luas Station, Milltown). Conleth Gent has exhibited widely throughout Ireland and has been a multi-award winner at Sculpture in Context in the National Botanic Gardens, Glasnevin. His work has been presented to President Mary Robinson and other dignitaries. He has worked on large scale sculptures for Dun Laoghaire and Galway County Councils.

The course is primarily aimed as an introduction to woodcarving with all tools and materials provided. The main focus is on creativity and individuality and nurturing it through the medium of woodcarving. All abilities will be catered for, as each participant will receive individual tuition. Participants will be introduced to the tools and how to sharpen and maintain them and the materials and characteristics of the different woods.

How to apply
Please email Conleth - conlethgent@eircom.net - to confirm your participation. Places are very few in number and strictly limited.

Fee
The course will cost €160 for five classes. Tea and coffee will be provided and all materials will be supplied. Full payment in advance by July 1st is essential and required to secure your place. Please note all monies are non-refundable except in the event of course cancellation.

Date, Time and Place
Every Monday 11am-1pm for five weeks commencing on July 30th 2018 in the Trinity College Botanic Gardens opposite Palmerston Park, Dartry, Dublin 6 (nearest Luas Station, Milltown).

Beginners Gardening

Hazel Proctor is an accomplished horticulturist and garden designer with over a decade experience working in parks and gardens across Ireland. She is currently the Head Gardener at The Steam Museum and Lodge Park Walled Garden, in Kildare and continues to deliver the Beginners Gardening Course in conjunction with the Botany Department.

During the course, you will gain a wide range of gardening skills such as how to propagate your own plants, the principles of pruning and how to choose the right plants for your garden. The course also includes lectures on the history of garden design and regular plant identification walks. Throughout the year, we enjoy visits to horticultural gems such as the War Memorial Garden and The National Botanic Gardens. The course starts in October and runs one day a week, each Wednesday, from 10am to 3pm, until May 2017.

How to apply
Please email Hazel at proctoh@tcd.ie to confirm your booking. Places are limited so early booking is advised.

Fee
The course costs €900 and a deposit of €200 must be paid by September 7th to secure your place. The remainder can be paid in two further instalments throughout the course of the year.

Greek and Roman art and architecture

There are a limited number of places available on this course.

This lecture-only module is an introductory survey of the development and major artistic and technical achievements of Greek and Roman architecture, sculpture and painting. The course places art and architecture in its social, political and cultural context. It explores themes such as the representation of the human form, the use of narrative and mythology in art, and urbanization, and it looks at the works of individual artists. It traces the development of architectural forms, such as temples, theatres and Roman baths with attention to many of the iconic buildings and sites of the ancient world, including the Parthenon, Delphi and Olympia, the Colosseum, the Pantheon and Pompeii.

Why did the Greeks and Romans worship many gods, believe in oracles, or perform animal sacrifice? This lecture-only module is an introduction to the major myths and religions of the classical world using the full range of primary source material: literary, artistic and archaeological. It explores the functions of myth within society and the various theories of myth. The first half of the course will focus on themes such as the creation of myths in the wider context of Near Eastern mythology, the character of the Olympian gods, heroes and their monstrous opponents, divine-human relations, and the major mythic cycles of the Trojan war, and the Atreus and Theban sagas. The second half of the course will explore the nature of Greek and Roman religion in its social context. It considers key elements of ritual action: sacrifice, rites of passage, festivals, as well as the diverse ancient beliefs on death and the afterlife and the role of mystery religions. This lecture-only course will be illustrated.

Lecturers
Dr Christine Morris and Dr Suzanne O’Neill

OPTIONAL SEMINARS: The optional seminars, which are a new addition to the course, will comprise two meetings per term. Taking place on Saturday mornings, the seminars will last 2.5 hours and will offer an opportunity for small group discussion of key themes in ancient mythology and religion. Materials for discussion will be provided ahead of the meetings. Light refreshments are included in the fee for this option.

From Rome to Byzantium: the transition from classical to early Byzantine world in the history, culture, literature and art of the 3rd to the 6th centuries AD

This course will run subject to sufficient numbers enrolling – there will be a limited number of places available.

Did the Roman Empire really collapse? Was the transition from Classical civilization to late antiquity the end of an era? Was this decline caused by migrations and the advent of Christianity? In this course we will address these questions and more to explore the period between the third to the seventh century AD, which marked one of history’s great turning points and the transition from the ancient to the modern world, from pagan polytheism to Christianity, from Roman Empire to Medieval States. This dynamic world was populated by diverse people (the “barbarians”) who deeply influenced the culture, literature and art of the time. In our studies, we will travel to Constantinople and Ravenna to appreciate the artistic continuity with classical tradition and the new inspirations coming from the East, and we will meet fascinating personalities such as Empress Theodora, Justinian, and Julian ‘the Apostle’, as well as reading exciting sources such as Procopius, Ammianus Marcellinus, and Nonnus, to understand how much of the empire’s legacy lived on through the institutions of the church.

Latin language and culture for beginners

This course will run subject to sufficient numbers enrolling – there will be a limited number of places available

This course offers a comprehensive appraisal of the language of ancient Rome. It also explores some central features of Latin literature. In this course we aim to examine the cultural context surrounding classical Latin and its successors. In the first term, those who have knowledge of Latin grammar will be able to review it at a leisurely pace, while people with little or no knowledge will have an opportunity to learn the basics of the Latin grammar. Aspects such as the origins and development of the Latin language, its power of communication, comparisons between formal and informal Latin in antiquity and beyond will also be considered. The second term will be devoted to a careful study of the Latin literary language through samplings of Latin authors, in both poetry and prose, ranging from antiquity to early modern times. We will consider the relevance of the past in the present and there will be time to explore some favourite topics more in-depth through inclusive but leisurely class discussion.

“The 2 required texts are Hans Henning Oerberg, Lingua Latina Pars I: Familia Romana and Jeanne Marie Neumann, Lingua Latina: A Companion to Familia Romana: Based on Hans Oerberg’s Latine Disco, with Vocabulary and Grammar, which can be ordered online or purchased from bookshops. Additional materials will be provided by the teacher.”

Cities in Literature

In this series of lectures, members of the School of English will give talks on the varied roles major cities including Dublin, London, Los Angeles, Paris, and New York, have played in literary works of different eras and genres.

Set in Dublin on a single day in 1904, James Joyce’s novel Ulysses is perhaps the best-known literary work tied to a particular city. The works of Charles Dickens and Arthur Conan Doyle transport us to Victorian England’s bustling metropolis of contrasts and contradictions. Dashiell Hammett, Joan Didion, and Nathanael West captured the dark heart of California’s cities. While portrayals of the different facets of urban life often underpin literary renderings of cities, absence of something from the depicted urban space can provide an equally powerful creative impetus, as witnessed by the wave of literary works, such as Don DeLillo’s The Falling Man or Art Spiegelman’s In The Shadow of No Towers, dealing with New York City in the wake of the ineffable loss following the events of 9/11.

Centre for Gender and Women’s Studies

Gender: history, culture and representation

‘The story is no longer about the things that have happened to women and men and how they have reacted to them; instead it is about how the subjective and collective meanings of women and men as categories of identity have been constructed.’ (Joan Scott, Gender and the Politics of History, New York, 19988, p.6). This lecture-only module will examine the histories and representations of gender, seeking to understand how gender is constructed by societies, institutions and individuals, through the critical analysis of texts, works of art and public actions. Gender, its role, its construction and its historiography will be brought together by scholars across the school in an interdisciplinary module. The operation of gender ‘as a tool of analysis’ will be examined in histories of the body, sexuality, medicine, religion, politics, institutions and representations in a variety of texts and contexts which will show the inherent instability and elusive nature of many gendered identities.

Health Policy and Management

Health Economics

This short course looks at the role of economic principles in understanding behaviour of users and providers of healthcare, in setting priorities and in financing access to care. Key issues to be examined include: the ways in which individuals respond to incentives; how we can best set healthcare priorities by evaluating the costs and effectiveness of healthcare interventions; and what are the advantages and disadvantages of different ways of financing health services. By the end of the course, participants should:

• Understand principles of demand and elasticity as applied to health and healthcare, and the implications for policies on charging for services and health promotion.

• Appreciate options for financing health services, and how different methods affect access to care and performance of providers of care.

• Describe the methods used in economic evaluation of health.

How to apply
Interested applicants please contact the Centre of Health Policy and Management, E: mscinhm@tcd.ie.

Managing People in Healthcare Organisations

This short course comprises three subjects: management and organisational behaviour; human resources management; and organisation development. The synergistic relationship between individual and group behaviour and organisational functioning and organisational culture is central to the course.

By the end of the course, participants should:

- Understand and utilise a strategic approach to the operation of the main activities in the management of people.
- Understand how to enable the healthy functioning of organisation systems through process consultation.
- Appreciate the role of the manager or leader in Irish healthcare, particularly in bringing about change and influencing the delivery of person-centred care in health services.

Introduction to Irish Family History

(This course will run subject to sufficient numbers applying)

Family History isn’t just about the past: learning about our origins allows people to get down to the granular details of our ancestors’ lives. It enables people to construct their own family narrative and their personal identity.

This lecture-only module is taught through a series of eight lectures per term over two terms by Fiona Fitzsimons & Brian Donovan of the Irish Family History Centre (Eneclann). The course covers a broad sweep of Irish history (1650s to 1950s), and is deeply rooted in the sources. The focus is on the records generated by churches, central and local government, enterprises, families and individuals; exploring what section of the Irish population is documented in these records, and how to interpret the evidence. Where record collections were destroyed, do any collateral records survive that contain relevant information?

The fee includes free access to the largest Irish collection online, www.Findmypast.ie as well as free access to EPIC and the Irish Family History Centre in CHQ. It will also provide support for all participants to construct a simple family history portfolio over sixteen weeks, including creating a family profile, research to collect documentary evidence; building a family tree; and writing a simple report.

Please note: This is a lecture-only course and does not include access to computers on campus. Participants must have access to their own computers at home for follow up clinics and research.

History

Kingship and Warfare: Ireland, c.1000-1318

This module begins with the rise of Brian Boru from modest origins to become Ireland’s most famous high king—a spectacular career that ended in the iconic battle of Clontarf in 1014. We explore how Irish society and kingship changed in the aftermath of Clontarf as a result of inter-provincial warfare and the changing role of the church. The second half of the module examines the causes and implications of the English (or Anglo-Norman) invasion of the late 1160s, perhaps the single most formative development in Irish secular affairs. We study the interaction of cultures in its aftermath and the Irish opposition to English rule that saw the emergence of England’s ongoing Irish problem through later centuries. The module closes with the most serious challenge to English power in medieval Ireland: the Scottish invasion (1315-18) led by Edward Bruce, brother of Robert Bruce king of Scots.

History

History of Continental Europe 1860 to 1918

This lecture-only module examines the evolution of a Europe that dominated the planet in the mid-19th century, and which stood at the zenith of colonial domination of the non-European world, to a continent in the 1920s that was shaken by the First World War and the redistribution of global power (to the USA, USSR and Japan). It also faced the first stirrings of anti-colonial opposition. The module will enable you to gain a good understanding of the forces that have shaped contemporary Europe since the mid-19th century. It will introduce you to a vital period in Europe’s recent past and offer you insights into different kinds of history – political, economic, social, and cultural.

History

Europe 1500-1800: Power and Culture

This lecture-only module explores the political and cultural history of Europe during the early modern period. It analyses the efforts of reformers to revive their churches and societies during the sixteenth century. It then examines the legacy of these reform movements, and considers how cultural divisions as well as competition for power led to prolonged periods of conflict within states and between states during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. This module then charts the emergence during the eighteenth century of new ways of thinking about private life and popular culture and of new ideas about science, society and the self of the Enlightenment. Finally, it explores how these ideas contributed to political crisis following the French Revolution.

Imperialism to Globalism: Europe and the World 1860-1970

Global integration is not only a fact of modern life, but of modern history writing. The interconnectedness of distant societies and states, and powerful forces making for social, cultural and economic interaction have prompted significant scholarly assessment.

This lecture-only module investigates some of the events and processes which have led to a more integrated world order between the mid-nineteenth century and the later twentieth century. For most of that period much of the world was carved up between a number of inter-continental empires centred in Europe. How those empires grew, exerted control and in due course retreated will be the particular focus of the module. But other processes, too, will be considered, not least the integrating force of economic changes and the spreading power of capitalism across the globe. Attention will be given to the evolution of ideologies of imperialism and social Darwinism and to whether or not such ideologies impacted upon changing global power relationships. The module, while broadly chronological in approach, will focus on a wide range of themes in cultural, economic and political history.

History of Art

Architecture in the 19th and 20th centuries

This lecture-only module offers an overview of architecture in the modern period and examines the theoretical principles of modernism and post-modernism. Traditionally this period is represented as a radical departure from the past. Students will be encouraged to analyse this assessment and to consider continuities in the design and making of buildings.

History of Art

Making and meaning in Irish art

The lecture-only module is designed as an introduction to Irish visual culture dating from pre-history to the end of the twentieth century. Lectures will include the identification of key works from Irish art and architecture, addressing fine, applied and popular artforms. Throughout the module, Irish visual culture will be discussed within its artistic, social and cultural contexts and will be cognisant of its place within a broader European perspective.

History of Art

Antiquity and innovation in early medieval art

The reign of King, later Emperor, Charlemagne (768–814) marked a flourishing of the visual arts that had not been seen since the fall of the Roman Empire. Often styled the ‘Carolingian Renaissance’, the artistic culture of the period was characterised by a politically-motivated evocation of the classical past, fused with elements of existing art styles and innovation in areas such as monastic planning and the commission of new types of fine metalwork and illuminated manuscript. This lecture-only module aims to introduce students to key works of art and architecture in Western Europe during the period c. 600 – c. 900. It will examine the development of distinctive artistic traditions leading up to the reign of Charlemagne (including that of Ireland and its cultural sphere), the forging of the unique characteristics of Carolingian art during the King/Emperor’s supremacy, and its legacy both within the Carolingian Empire and beyond.

History of Art

Painting and sculpture in the Italian Renaissance

This lecture-only module is an exploration of Italian art and its contexts from c.1300 to the late 1400s. The era is distinguished by a revival of interest in Italy’s classical past and the emergence of Humanist philosophies; the impact of both on artistic production will be investigated. Traditional themes in art, such as religious subject matter, will be analysed as will the development of new secular themes including portrait and classical mythology. The role of patronage, civic and private, the dissemination of Italian Renaissance ideas throughout Europe and the rising status of the artist will be considered and formal issues of style, art processes and production will figure prominently.

History of Art
Post modern and contemporary art

This lecture-only module examines the art of the last fifty years or so from the mid 1960s to the present day. Post-modernism simultaneously built on and challenged aspects of Modernism. Inspired by the challenges to the fundamental meaning and purpose of art by Marcel Duchamp, Post-Modernism found its initial impetus in the pivotal phases of Minimalism and Pop Art, leading in turn to new concepts, methods and styles as found for example in Conceptualism and Land Art, as well as to the adoption of ‘new’ materials involving time-based, performance, and lens-based media.
We will examine the relationship between Conceptualism and traditional art forms like painting, as well as the emergence of alternative three-dimensional and installation formats.

This lecture-only module will examine cultural highpoints in the arts of Japan from the fourteenth to the nineteenth centuries.
Artefacts in all media – painting, ceramics, lacquer and textiles – will be examined in the context of the influence of China on Japan, the creation of the Shogun Court, the rise of the merchant classes and the establishment of the pleasure districts in burgeoning Tokyo.
Particular attention will be paid to lacquer ware created for the domestic and European market, the arts associated with the tea ceremony and traditional Japanese theatre.
Themes of Japonisme will be explored, particularly in nineteenth century Ireland as Japan emerged after 250 years of self-imposed isolation from the outside world.

Irish

A history of Irish personal names and surnames

This lecture-only course in Irish personal names and surnames will present a history of Irish names from the oldest sources up to the present day. The anatomy of the personal name will be examined and it will be demonstrated that Irish names have a Celtic past dating back into the pre-Christian period, and an Indo-European past of greater antiquity. Sources from Continental Gaul, Wales and Early Christian Ireland (Ogam inscriptions) will get the course started, and we will follow the development of Irish names through Old, Middle and Early Modern Irish manuscript sources, drawing on saga, genealogy, history and Dindshenchas. The Irish were first in Europe to develop hereditary surnames and that development will be examined, as will the influence of Latin, Welsh, Scandinavian, Anglo-Norman and English on the Irish name-types. The relative frequency of personal names will be assessed at different points to demonstrate changes in fashion, and here the census returns of the last century and a half will bring us up to the present day. The course will extend over a twelve-week term commencing on Monday 25th September, at 6pm, with a one-week break in the term (6th-10th November).

Physics

Foundation Physics for Earth and Life Sciences

This course is aimed at students who may have no prior background in physics but who would like to learn about how physics affects the world around them, in particular the impact physics has on the earth and life sciences. This course may be of particular interest to those considering a career in post-primary teaching. It carries 10 credits (ECTS).
It is a foundation course of 44 hours of lectures or tutorials and 33 hours of experimental laboratory work and includes the following topics: physics of motion (mechanics), biomechanics, physics of hearing and seeing (waves), electricity and magnetism and bioelectricity, radioactivity, nuclear physics and related medical applications, heat, pressure and fluids and some of their biological, geological and medical applications.

Learning Outcomes
• Demonstrate the application of classical physic within the biomedical and earth sciences
• Connect the study of wave phenomena and electromagnetism with ultrasound diagnostics and vision • Relate basic knowledge of atomic and nuclear physics to radiation diagnostics and therapy, and to geological applications
• Prepare a brief report, including error
analysis, on a simple physical experiment • Through homework: (i) to identify the appropriate concepts, principles, and relations that apply to the problem; (ii) provide a reasonable and appropriate explanation of why they apply; and (iii) to solve physics problems at a foundation level

Admission criteria
Applications will be considered from students or graduates of degrees in earth or life sciences or from others who can demonstrate the necessary ability in mathematics e.g.
have completed first-year mathematics in an undergraduate degree in a technical subject.

Eras and classical authors in the history of Christianity

This course introduces discourse about God in Eastern and Western European Christianity from the patristic to the modern eras. It examines key turning points in theological history: the role and achievements in Christology of the Ecumenical Councils in the patristic period with a focus on Nicaea (325); Byzantine Iconoclasm, the Schism East and West in relation to theologies of the Holy Spirit; the rise of the monasteries with a focus on the Rule of St Benedict; the medieval synthesis of Aristotelian philosophy and Christian theology (Aquinas); the Reformation (Luther) and Counter-reformation (Council of Trent); theology in Modernity (Schleiermacher) and contemporary theology, including the reception of humanist atheism (Feuerbach) and ‘nihilism’ (Nietzsche).

Religion in Public: Great Speeches

This module investigates “Great Speeches” – famous, influential, remembered speeches that made an impact on cultural and political changes in different areas of the world – with a special focus on the many and diverse roles religion has been playing in important moments of cultural change. The goal of the module is to provide different scholarly perspectives on the diversity of how religion is mediated and has been part of public debate in many, and often unexpected ways. Through the lenses of Biblical, Islamic and Literary Studies, Theology and the Cultural Study of Religion we will analyse the speeches and their contexts, from politics and cultural life, linked to the relevance of religion as argument, as rhetoric and as value background. Names such has Mahatma Gandhi and Martin Luther King, Arundhati Roy and Albert Camus, Mohammad the Prophet and Friedrich Schleiermacher at the turn of the Enlightenment into Romanticism, demonstrate the scope of backgrounds we will address. Knowing about the impact of religion as a cultural force will build up a competence which is most important for the encounter within a multi-cultural globalized world.

Ethics in Sport and Media Ethics

Beginning with an overview of traditions of ethics, this module treats two key areas of applied ethics. Sport in contemporary society has been described both as an expression of the highest human and social values, and as a legally secured parallel world of the elite pursuit of victories and medals. On the one hand, as a sphere of physical self-realization, social formation and of moral training in fairness, it is seen as an area with standards of excellence that can be closely aligned to ethics. On the other hand, individual sport stars and the institutions of organized sport have been subject to multiple enquiries and critiques: for example, on doping, corruption, sponsorship, the power of mentors and child protection. The variety of facets to the question of ethics in the domains of sport requires a multidisciplinary response. In order to connect to the necessary element of “field work”, an integral part of this module will be attendance in a conference on Ethics in Sport which will take place in the Trinity Long Room Hub on Saturday Nov 4th, 2017. It will feature some leading personalities in Irish sport of the past and present to give the practitioners’ perspective on ethics and sport. The concluding part of the module with deal with Media Ethics. At a time of “fake news” and of debates on the effects of social media, its importance is inescapable.

Institutions of Education and Science in Classical Islam

This module will explore the historical development of the various institutions that shaped religious and scientific knowledge in Islamic civilization. It will examine philosophical/scientific and religious contexts of learning in their symbiotic relationship, with an emphasis on the connections between science and religious tradition, revelation and rational methods of investigation. The module will survey the main institutions that marked the full development of classical Islamic scholarship, ranging from the hospital and observatory, to the library, mosque, caliphal palace and especially the madrasa or Islamic university. Topics covered in class will include patterns and practices of knowledge production in medieval and postclassical Islam (circles of learning, patronage, medieval Islamic curricula, etc.), the place of science in medieval Islamic scholarship, modern scholarly debates about the relationship between science and Islam, and the development of the madrasa from its medieval origin up to the modern period and its relation European universities.

The Historical Jesus and the Gospels

Who was the historical Jesus – the Jewish Galilean whose activities and death resulted in the emergence of Christianity? This class explores questions about Jesus the man, his world, his Jewish disciples and their literary activities. The earliest literary witness to his life—namely the gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke—occupy a significant amount of our attention. In order to assess Jesus’ environment and social milieu we shall engage with material culture and archaeology, as well as other ancient literature such as Josephus and selected Dead Sea Scrolls. You will have the opportunity to study literary theories and approaches used to read ancient literature in order to develop and articulate your own viewpoint on the origins of Christianity. In conclusion to this module issues that arise in the assessment of Jesus as a historical figure will be explored as they relate to other religious traditions, particularly ancient Judaism and early Islam (i.e. the historical Muhammad).

Christology: Jesus in the first century, at turning points of Christian thinking, in music and film

This course investigates Christology, the study of the person of Jesus Christ, and Soteriology, the understandings of his work of redemption as they were developed in different eras. The first part will begin with the worship of Jesus Christ in the first Christian communities and conclude with the first Christian councils from Nicaea to Chalcedon which tried to resolve disputes about the understanding of his person in the intellectual categories of Greek philosophical culture. The second part will follow the developments in the theological understanding of his person and his work of redemption from the Middle Ages to Modernity. Specific elements of the cultural history of reception of Christology will be exemplified in classical music and modern film.

Great Controversies in the Histories of Monotheism

European thinking has been marked by great disputes in the encounter between the monotheistic religions with the philosophical and ethical thinking of their times. The module will treat key questions and turning points in the history of thinking from Antiquity to Modernity: the conflict between Gnosticism and a positive biblical understanding of creation, debates about free will and human sin between Augustine and Pelagius, and on reason and revelation in Islamic religious thought. The polemics on God as One or as Triune between Islam and Christianity will be investigated, before turning to the early modern ages with Las Casas’ defense of the humanity of the natives of Latin America. The controversy between Luther and Erasmus is followed by the religion versus science dispute of Galileo. The challenge of Kant’s demolition of the proofs for God’s existence for theology and Schleiermacher’s response will conclude the study of the series of conflicts that have constituted key elements of the West’s intellectual history.

Approaches to Theological Ethics

The contributions Christian ethicists make to debates in the public sphere depend on the approaches they take to this discipline, basing it on the Bible or the worshipping community, on virtue, on classical or revisionist Natural Law, on principled autonomy in a Christian framework, or on different feminist positions. The module will investigate these approaches in terms of their methods and basic concepts, and on how they relate to movements of philosophical thought and to other theological disciplines, such as biblical studies and hermeneutics. How they evaluate some concrete ethical issues and justify their positions will also be compared.

The Qurʾān and its history of reception

This is an introductory course on the Qurʾān, the sacred text of Islam, and on its reception both in the classical Islamic period and modernity. The course does not require prior knowledge of the subject and will introduce students to some of the major Qurʾānic themes and to the ways in which this foundational work has been interpreted by generations of medieval and modern readers. Topics to be discussed include the social, religious, and historical circumstances surrounding the emergence of the Qurʾān; the structure, style, and literary techniques underlying the Qurʾānic text; the tradition of religious exegesis (tafsīr) that developed in Islam; and key Qurʾānic narratives and themes. Students will acquire a basic understanding of the place of this scripture in the Islamic tradition and of its role in Muslim worship and cult. The class will consist of both lectures and student discussion on key themes covered by the readings. We will also be reading various Qurʾānic verses in a comparative perspective with the other monotheistic traditions.

Approaches to the Study of Religion

Religion as a cultural phenomenon is interrelated with all aspects of human life. A broad range of approaches are applied within the academic study of religion. After a short overview of the disciplinary history of this subject, the course will provide an introductory understanding of ‘classical’ approaches such as the sociology, the anthropology and the psychology of religion, and of more recently emerging concepts such as the economy or the aesthetics of religion.

Religion in Public: Great Images

Religion is too often seen as a matter of reading and interpreting holy books and doctrinal formulations. Religious expression, however, is also a function of the eyes, where seeing and being seen play a central role in the public expression of religious thoughts. "Great Images" are visual examples of the public understanding of religion from antiquity to contemporary society which will be studied at different levels (political, social, and cultural). Students will be offered the opportunity to reflect on examples of religious visual culture such as the depiction of crucifixion in early Christianity, the role of icons in Orthodox Christian devotion and worship, important landmarks of Islamic architecture, the role of artistic expression in the theological debate of European modernity, as well as its role in religious propaganda, conflict and contemporary interreligious dialogue.

Key Themes in Theology

This module first presents key systematic themes in theology: the truth claim of monotheism and its alleged link to violence, understandings of humans being made in the image of God, of Adam’s sin and of salvation in the history of Christian thinking, theodicy and eschatology. Secondly it will introduce key modern contextual theologies: political, liberation and feminist theologies. Its third part will discuss the question of theology at the university since 1800.

The End of the World: The Johannine Writings

The book of Revelation depicts a series of apocalyptic, end time judgments that lead to cosmic catastrophe followed by a new heaven and new earth. The author of the Apocalypse, John at Patmos, is not alone in believing that there is more than just this world—there is another world. As such, the book of Revelation is participating in a worldview in which reflection upon another world and otherworldly beings are dominant themes. Expectations of the end are not only thought about in terms of time (i.e. a linear progression from past, to present, to future), but also space (e.g. the world above and below; material vs. spiritual). To better understand the Apocalypse of John this class sets it among: (1) other early Christian writings and especially the Gospel of John; (2) ancient Jewish apocalyptic thought; and (3) the so-called early Christian “Gnostic” writings.

Hermeneutics: the Bible, classical texts, modern disputes, the environment

This course will trace the history of interpretation of texts, investigating the nature of language and meaning, of action, interpretation and subjectivity. It will reflect on the theological and philosophical presuppositions that influenced Biblical interpretation in the history of those texts’ reception. It will explore the hermeneutical approaches and evaluations of Friedrich Schleiermacher, Hans-Georg Gadamer and Paul Ricoeur and case studies in hermeneutics in biblical studies, historiography, translation, ecology, ethics and intercultural encounter.

Comparative Religious Ethics in Christianity, Islam and Buddhism

Comparative religious ethics has long been an area of academic interest, one which has acquired greater significance over recent decades. In the contemporary context of global interdependence the comparative study of religious ethics is of great importance since it provides opportunities for mutual understanding and cross-cultural engagement. Using a variety of theoretical, historical, hermeneutical and narrative approaches, comparative religious ethics facilitates an examination of the moral beliefs, values, practices and institutions of the various religious traditions; an interrogation of their apparent similarities and differences and an appreciation of the evolution of, and diversity within, some of world’s most influential moral traditions. This module provides an introduction to the comparative study of religious ethics, with an emphasis on the religions of Buddhism, Islam and Christianity. The module will begin with a discussion of the methods and purpose of the comparative study of religious ethics, highlighting the different conceptual and methodological approaches and discussing their relative limitations and strengths. The module will then examine the traditions of Buddhism, Islam and Christianity focusing in each case on i) their conceptualization of the moral life, ii) understandings of the self, iii) of the individual in social and political life and iv) their attitudes to violence. The module will conclude with a case study on Engaging Sacred Values: Peace making in the Holy Land.

Contemporary Ethical Issues

The course analyses contemporary biomedical debates in their underlying philosophical and theological principles, values, and views of the human being. It examines the different Irish, European and international argumentations and legislations that these debates have produced. Issues at the beginning and at the end of human life, the possible conflict between parents’ and children’s perspectives, and the visions of society and humanity implied in positions on advance care directives, on the new reproductive technologies, genetics, healing, enhancement, and cloning will be discussed. Films and excerpts from (what used to be?) science fiction will provide additional avenues to the topics.

Russian, Central and Eastern European Studies

Prohibited Czech Literature and Charter 77

Lecturer
Dr Jana van der Ziel Fischerová

This course is intended for all those who like to read, and especially for those intrigued by the relationship between literature and (undemocratic) society. It caters for people who already have a specific interest in Czech literature and culture, as well as those who simply like to explore new contexts and themes.

Course outline
In the 1970s-1980s, a number of the most significant Czech writers were unable to officially publish their works in Czechoslovakia. Václav Havel, Ivan Klíma, Milan Kundera, Josef Škvorecký, and other world-renowned authors, came into conflict with the neo-Stalinist regime installed in the country after the suppression of the Prague Spring, and found themselves blacklisted. Their texts survived only thanks to the alternative system of book production and distribution – the unofficial networks of samizdat and exile publishing. This course examines the ways in which these networks operated, who ran them and at what risk, and how their work benefitted the contemporary Czech reader. We shall discuss and critically evaluate the importance of samizdat and exile publishing for preserving the continuity of Czech literature, as well as its role in the cultivation of the Czech language in a period marked by communist speak and strict censorship. We shall also consider the role of translation of prohibited Czech books (into English and other major languages) in the context of the fight against the suppression of free speech and the regime’s monopoly on information.

As this year we are marking 40 years since the creation of Charter 77, an informal civic initiative which monitored the communist regime’s breaching of human rights conventions, a part of our programme will be devoted to a consideration of its legacy. Its co-creators Václav Havel and philosopher Jan Patočka will be among those discussed, as will the involvement in its work of a number of prohibited Czech writers.

We have invited one of the chief former samizdat publishers, together with a former samizdat translator, to join us for a discussion at the end of the course.

A reading list of key texts (fiction and essays) will be supplied closer to the starting date of the course.

How to apply
Application forms are available from the Department of Russian and Slavonic Studies, Room 5045, Arts Building, Trinity College Dublin, the University of Dublin, Dublin 2. The completed application form accompanied by payment in the form of a personal cheque, postal money order or bank draft, payable to Trinity College Dublin no. 1 account should be returned to: The Executive Officer, Department of Russian and Slavonic Studies, Room 5045, Arts Building, Trinity College Dublin, the University of Dublin, Dublin 2. Fee €150 for ten 90-minute lectures, payable in advance (by 22nd September 2017). This fee is non-refundable once the course has commenced. A concession rate (€100) is available to Trinity undergraduate and postgraduate students. The number of concession rate places in any given class is restricted to twenty per cent. Payment must accompany applications.

Time and place
Mondays, 7 p.m. - 8.30 p.m., in Room TBA, Arts Building, Trinity College Dublin, the University of Dublin, Dublin 2.

Duration
Lecturing commences on Monday 2nd October 2017. There will be no lecture on 30th October (Bank Holiday).
Contemporary Literature and Cinema in the European Southeast and the Question of Balkan Identity

This course provides an overview of Bulgarian contributions to the narrative arts of fiction and cinema today. Bulgaria is known for its folklore, choirs, opera singers and Christo (Yavashev and Stoichkov), but its literature is rarely translated and its cinema is seldom screened. This course shows why this attitude is unwarranted, but also what stands behind it: what are the likely cultural and historical, aesthetic and stylistic, marketing and publicity issues for such a notorious non-presence.

How to apply

Application forms are available from the Department of Russian and Slavonic Studies either in hard copy or electronic form (http://www.tcd.ie/Russian/courses/evening-courses/index.php). Duration

Lecturing commences on Monday 2nd October 2017. There will be no lecture on 30th October (Bank Holiday).

Social Sciences and Philosophy

Great Philosophers

Following on from last year’s highly successful course, this course introduces a further selection of great philosophers who helped form Western civilization. Crucial ideas about the nature of reality, humankind’s place in the world, the good society, human destiny, values and knowledge were articulated and developed by these thinkers. Each lecture is an introduction to the life, work, context and impact of the philosopher in question.

Lecturers

The lecturers are drawn from the staff of the Department of Philosophy at Trinity College Dublin, the University of Dublin.

How to apply

Register in advance (prior to 26th September 2017) by post, to the Executive Officer, Department of Philosophy, Arts Building, Trinity College Dublin, the University of Dublin, Dublin 2 enclosing a cheque/draft/postal money order made payable to Trinity College Dublin no. 1 account. Your receipt will be your ticket for the series. Registration is also possible on the evening of the first lecture of the series (outside the lecture theatre).

Fee

The cost for the full series is €100. Concession rate (£50) is available to students, unemployed persons and those in receipt of a social welfare pension.

Date, time and place

There will be ten lectures beginning on Monday 26th September 2017 from 7.30 p.m. to 9 p.m., in the Uí Chadhain Theatre, Arts Building, Trinity College Dublin, the University of Dublin, Dublin 2. Please note there will be no lecture on Tuesday 7th November 2017.

Big Questions in Philosophy

Following on from last year’s highly successful course, this course introduces a further selection of great questions facing humankind. Topics such as whether we have free will, what’s the basis of morality, is there any certain knowledge, what is meaning, what is the relation of mind to body will be addressed. Each lecture is a stand-alone topic and presupposes no prior knowledge of philosophy.

Great Questions in Philosophy

Following on from last year’s highly successful course, this course introduces a further selection of great questions facing humankind. Topics such as whether we have free will, what’s the basis of morality, is there any certain knowledge, what is meaning, what is the relation of mind to body will be addressed. Each lecture is a stand-alone topic and presupposes no prior knowledge of philosophy.
The main focus of these lectures is on the two most formidable forms of after-death existence: (1) the next life as a dream-image world in which the deceased person continues as a dream-image person or self; which (2) is then followed by the reincarnation of his natural or innate character. Something close to these two forms of after-death existence are powerfully presented in Plato’s Republic 614-21, in the myth of Er. But Plato’s accounts needed a new and more literal re-working, which I believe to be found in the writings of two 20th century philosophers: the first in the Oxford analytic philosopher H. H. Price, the second the Cambridge idealist John McTaggart. But crucial difficulties still remain, especially how a person can exist as a dream-image person after being divested of his or her body and brain, and how reincarnation can be of any interest or value if the supposed reincarnated self does not remember its previous life.

Although I look at the evidence for and against both forms of after-death existence, my focus in these lectures is on McTaggart’s defence of immortality, which is in his Human Immortality and Pre-Existence, 1916. However, I also examine additional elements relating to reincarnation and after-death existences, as well as trying to explain why, apart from Plato and McTaggart, reincarnation has not (apart from one or two possible exceptions) been taken seriously by philosophers in the West.

More information about the content of this course can be found in a workbook on the subject, written by the lecturer and available from him.

Lecturers
Prof. David Berman

How to apply
Register in advance by post, to the Executive Officer, Department of Philosophy, Arts Building, Trinity College Dublin 2 enclosing a cheque/draft/postal money order made payable to Trinity College Dublin no. 1 account. Your receipt will be your ticket for the series. Registration might also be possible on the morning of the first lecture. But note that the number of places is limited to 20.

Fee
The cost for the ten lectures is €90. Concession rate (€60) is available to students, unemployed persons and those in receipt of a social welfare pension.

Date, time and place
The ten lectures take place on Saturdays, 10:00 a.m.- 11:15, in the Philosophy seminar room, 5012, Arts Building, Trinity College, Dublin 2. The first lecture is on 30 September 2017.

The Lir Academy

Acting and Irish Theatre

This four week intensive course is for international students who wish to expand, explore and deepen their awareness of Irish theatre. The course draws on the central aspects of The Lir Academy’s core teaching, focusing particularly on twentieth and twenty-first century Irish plays and playwrights.

The course is aimed at professional actors or those who are undertaking serious training elsewhere and are about to set out on a professional acting career.

This course is worth 10 ECTS (European Credit Transfer Accumulation System).

Participants on the course will engage with some of the greatest plays in the history of the English language written by some of Ireland’s leading writers including J.M. Synge, Sean O’Casey, Samuel Beckett, Brian Friel, Tom Murphy, Conor McPherson, Martin McDonagh, Marina Carr and Enda Walsh.

Acting, Voice and Movement classes will focus on the unique demands of performing Irish plays. Voice classes will focus on the particular requirements of Irish texts including a wide range of Irish contemporary and historic dialects. The actor will explore the notion of body and movement in Irish play texts through different periods of history in relation to culture, clothing, dance, beliefs and superstitions, urban and rural environments, physical embodiment of work, past-time and muscularity of text. A further class will explore the production and performance history of some of the most iconic plays in the Irish repertoire.

Introduction to Acting

The Lir Academy’s Introduction to Acting course is perfect for those who are both inquisitive about a future career in acting and those who simply want to challenge themselves by stretching their creative muscles. Led by some of The Lir Academy’s core teachers, this workshop-based evening course is taught over 10 weeks. Each two and a half hour session consists of a physical warm-up followed by a voice or movement/improvisation class and culminates with a 90 minute acting workshop. The course will cover key elements of actor training including Voice, Movement and Improvisation, but will also introduce participants to classical and contemporary play texts, using both scenes and monologues to hone your craft. These workshops act as both a taste of drama school training and as a broad and basic introduction to the craft of acting.

The Loyola Institute

Catholic Theology in a Secular Age: A Critical Introduction

The purpose of this course is to introduce the student to the foundational concepts of Catholic theology as a living tradition with deep roots of intellectual enquiry, and to do so in the context of the secular age in which we live. There is a study of the concept of secularity and post secularity. There will be an examination of the argument that there is a sort of ‘buried’ theological narrative in western culture and its consequences explored. Theological method will be introduced, including hermeneutical theory and the debates about the ‘systamtity’ of Catholic theology, which encompasses the efforts to create an intellectual and integrated synthesis. There will be a short introduction to the thought of Thomas Aquinas.

Ethics and Society in Catholic Traditions

This course studies the modern tradition of Catholic social thought. It has a dual focus, namely, on the social encyclicals of different pontiffs in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, and on the diverse theological traditions of interpretation in different historical, cultural and geographical contexts. Key concepts including solidarity, subsidiarity and common good will be considered through the lens of these texts and the interpretative traditions. Theological analyses of, and responses to, specific social and political issues will be assessed. Among the issues that will be considered will be: religious liberty, economic justice, war and political conflict.

Foundations for Theological Ethics

This course studies central concepts and key debates in theological ethics, including natural law and the universality of ethics; the nature and role of conscience, moral reasoning and the role of moral principles; the role of church teaching authority in the Catholic tradition (the magisterium) in the moral area. It studies the nature of moral experience and its relation to religious faith and, in this context, will consider the role of the bible in theological ethics from both historical and contemporary perspectives. The course will introduce students to the diversity of methodological approaches in Catholic theological ethics including the moral area, the deontological, and the teleological and virtue-based approaches. There will be reflection on the impact of feminist and post-colonial perspectives on the shape of contemporary theological ethics.

God: One and Three

This course studies how the Christian understanding of God as Trinity emerges from the Christology of the New Testament. It studies the subsequent development in the patristic era, most notably in the texts of the early councils of the Church. The Trinitarian theologies of some major theologians in the Western tradition, particularly Augustine and Aquinas, will be studied, and the distinct path taken by the Eastern tradition sketched. The course studies the work of contemporary theologians, whose work has contributed significantly to the renewal of Trinitarian theology. A study of the theology of the Holy Spirit will be an important part of this course.

Jewish Origins and the Hebrew Bible: Texts and Contexts

The variety of terms used to designate the ‘Hebrew Bible’ (e.g. Old Testament, Hebrew Scriptures, Tanak) indicate the richness of traditions related to these writings, the various ways that they are viewed, and also their life within different communities at different times. This course will orient students to the development of a variety of documents that are, or were, included in the scriptural traditions of various Jewish and Christian communities in antiquity. Questions related to forms before development of canons of scripture will be one main concern. When texts and their contents are a focal point students will be familiarised with many of the methods used for interpreting these writings. Focus on context will involve setting writings within their historical periods, political and social contexts, and provide information about material culture and archaeology relevant to a historical and literary approach to the subject.

The Development of Wisdom Literature

This module is concerned to provide a detailed synopsis of sapiential expressions found in the biblical tradition through to the transformation of wisdom in the Hellenistic period. Beginning in the Ancient Near East the book of Proverbs will be discussed in reference to Egyptian wisdom before considering the poetic expressions of the Psalms, Lamentations, and Ecclesiastes. The book of Job and questions about theodicy and the political context out of which it was written will also be addressed. Wisdom in the Hellenistic Period, particularly the Wisdom of Solomon and Sirach (Ben Sire), is given attention before turning to previously unknown sapiential works discovered among the Dead Sea Scrolls that have challenged scholars to revisit perceptions of ancient ‘wisdom’. It will also consider later Christian theology’s response to Israel’s Wisdom tradition.

The Making of Catholic Theology: The Medieval Period

This course will study the political, cultural and religious context in which Catholic theology developed in the medieval period. For three centuries monastic schools, alongside cathedral schools, were the context in which a flourishing Christian literature thrived. The introduction of Greco-Arabic thought in the final decades of the twelfth century, as well as the development of university charters, led to new synthesis of previous lines of theological exploration in the works of Aquinas. Towards the later centuries of the medieval period new forms of social life, including new feminist roles, are the context in which notable movements of women mystics flourished. Some works of these women mystics will be studied.

The Making of Catholic Theology: The Modern Period (c. 1900-2000)

This course will study the political, cultural and religious context in which, through a series of movements of thought, Catholic theology changed profoundly in the period 1900-2000. Among these factors are the effects of the First and Second World Wars, the anti-modernist regime that was in the ascendant at the beginning of the twentieth century, the movement known as ‘resourcement’, the liturgical movement, the opening to critical and historical Catholic hermeneutics in biblical studies, and the Second Vatican Council.

The Making of Catholic Theology: The Patristic Period

This course will study the early centuries of the Church’s history. These witnessed the search for true Christian identity in relation to the acknowledged ancestry in Judaism. It was a period of developing dialogue with the surrounding cultures, and the critical appropriation of some of the best elements of the philosophical schools. The variety of genres of patristic writings will be explored and students will be encouraged to adopt a ‘hands-on’ approach to reading selected patristic texts.

Theological Anthropology

This course studies what it means to be human from the perspective of theology. The study begins within the horizon of Jewish experience as articulated especially in the early chapters of the Book of Genesis and chapters in Exodus which narrate the gift of Covenant. Within these chapters the themes of the human reality as the imago Dei as well as the theme of deep seated human alienation are studied. Early Irish iconography, including the great High Crosses, will be studied as a distinctive treatment of these themes. Graced humanity is a central topic of the course. This course studies its deployment through the centuries, alongside contemporary re-workings.

Theology in the Reformation and the Counter-Reformation

This course will study the political, cultural and religious context in which Catholic theology developed in the Reformation and the Counter-Reformation period. The contribution of the major figures of the European Reformation such as Luther and Calvin will be evaluated critically. The crucial role of the bible, its translation and commentary both by the reformers and by Catholics, will be studied. A clearer statement of Catholic theology will be studied alongside the re-invigorating of the mystical tradition (especially in the works of Teresa of Avila, John of the Cross and the spiritual exercises of Ignatius Loyola) and a vigorous visual restatement of Catholic beliefs in the work of artists like Michelangelo and Caravaggio.

The Ethics of Embodiment

This module will examine the central importance of embodiment and incarnation in Christian theological traditions generally and Catholic Christian thought in particular. We will explore how Christian theo-ethical traditions think with and have defined (or not) bodies and flesh. Centered on the embodied themes of “vulnerability” and “resilience”, this module will ask how those carnal traditions might inform personal ethical stances and public politics.

We will reflect upon a number of themes including embodiment as everyday practices like eating or bathing, sexual ethics, LGBTQ identity, race, ideas of the “body politic”, the politics of empathy, and embodied affect.
