

LIFE CHOICES

for Older People with Intellectual Disabilities.

Choice is a human right.

Most people make choices everyday.

Other times people have big life decisions to make.

Some people with ID do not make choices about how to live their life. Other people make these decisions.

More people living independently or with family get to make choices.

People who live in large institutions have less opportunity to make choices.

People with ID were more likely to make choices about everyday things like what TV shows to watch and what time to go to bed.

Fewer people with ID made decisions about where to live, who to live with and where to keep their money.
