

French as a New Minor Subject

Details for 2021-22

1. Why take this New Minor Subject?

French is a major world language, with a rich cultural and intellectual heritage. Knowledge of the French language and its literature, history, and society opens up a world of opportunities to those who study them. French is an official working language of many international organisations (UN, OECD, NATO, etc.) and as such plays a decisive role in world affairs. French studies also develop highly sought-after transferrable skills – excellent written and oral communication skills, critical thinking, dealing with ambiguity, extensive analytical skills – which are sought after across a range of sectors, such as the creative industries, publishing, interpreting, teaching, journalism, broadcasting, diplomacy, public service, and tourism, to name but a few. Not only is the study of French language, literature, history, politics and philosophy a hugely enriching intellectual experience, but it also leaves graduates very well placed to succeed in a wide range of professional contexts.

2. What will I learn?

As a student of French as a New Minor Subject, you will study French language, and francophone history, culture and society for up to three years. In SF, you will have two hours of language class per week (one in a small group, one as a lecture) in which you'll revise the fundamentals of grammar and learn how to compose short essays on contemporary topics. You'll also be introduced to aspects of contemporary French and francophone culture and society and have oral language classes with native French speakers. In JS, you'll continue with language classes and study translation and composition. If you decide to stick with French throughout your degree you'll also choose from a range of options on French linguistics, political thought and literature in JS. If you choose to continue French in SS, you'll study advanced composition and translation, and can choose from a range of advanced optional modules on French literature, history, and linguistics.
