All-day

Optional tours

Option 1: Cliffs of Moher (full-day tour, 7am-8pm)

The tour starts with early morning pickup from Dublin's city center.

Travel through West Ireland's wild countryside toward the Kilmacduagh Monastery. One of the finest collections of monastic buildings in Ireland, the monastery dates back over 1000 years. Spend time exploring the ruins, graveyard, and 12th-century round tower.

Continue on to the Cliffs of Moher. Get almost two hours to wander around the cliffs, take in panoramic views of the northern Atlantic Ocean, and pop into the visitor center.

Then head to The Burren, a series of unusual karst rocks with views across the Aran Islands and Twelve Bens mountain range.

Afterward, it's on to the Wild Atlantic Way. As you ride down the way, catch sight of Dunguaire Castle, as well as the villages of Kinvara, Ballyvaughan, and Kilfenora.

Up next is Galway. You can either spend about an hour exploring "The Venice of the west" on your own, or you can follow your guide around the main street as you learn about the most popular shops and eateries.

Option 2: Giant's Causeway (full-day tour, 7am-8pm)

The tour starts with pickup from central Dublin in a comfortable, Wi-Fi-equipped coach bus. On the way to Belfast, you'll stop at a rest area for breakfast, drinks, or snacks.

At Belfast, your guide will point you to a black cab for a tour led by someone who grew up there during the Northern Ireland Conflict. Visit the Falls and Shankill neighborhoods, hearing first-hand accounts of the battles between the Catholics and the Protestants. You'll see the Peace Wall, where you can sign your own name.

Afterward, you'll ride on the bus to the Giant's Causeway, with a chance to buy lunch before walking down the hill to the UNESCO World Heritage Site.

Lastly, walk across the Carrick-a-Rede Rope Bridge over the ocean before making the return drive back to Dublin.

Option 3: Golf at Powerscourt

Ireland is home to over 300 golf courses, including eight that are in the Golf Digest's Top 100.

Just half an hour South of Dublin City Centre, Powerscourt Golf Club is set in the foothills of the rolling Wicklow hills and Ireland's most beautiful and intriguing state. Opened in 1996 Powerscourt features two of the finest championship courses in Ireland, which despite their proximity to each other, pose remarkably different challenges for any golfer.
